Girl Who Saw Slaying Tries to Kill Self

Joe Adonis Named Big Victim in Stamp Deal

Gambler Among 5 Large 'Investors'; Two 'Taken' for $54,000, $50,000

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Joe Adonis, who proudly terms himself a big-time gambler, yesterday was identified as loser of more than $100,000 in the collapse of a gigantic stamp buying and selling deal.

Other persons tied in as victims of a quick money scheme allegedly operated by Harold F. Ambrose, who was forced to resign his $10,000-a-year job as special assistant to the Postmaster General, were:

Henrik Mannerfrid, a New York exporter, whose losses were reported as $54,000. Mannerfrid has retained Max O. Truitt, attorney and son-in-law of Vice President Barkley, to help him recover his losses.

Bruce Livie, head of Motor Sales Co. in Baltimore, an auto agency, and owner of the Bobanet Horse Stable, which runs horses at tracks throughout the East. Livie was listed as losing $50,000.

Others Involved

Three others involved in the deals, but who may not have lost any money, were listed as a member of the du Pont family in Wilmington, another Wilmington man, and a New Jersey parachute firm president.

In addition, there were reports of other smaller "investors" from New York City, Pittsburgh, and Toledo, and there may be others, according to Postoffice Department investigators.

The three heavy losers were identified first by Ray Henle, radio newscaster, in a broadcast last night over WRC and the National Broadcasting Co. network.

How Operation Worked

Adonis, one of the Nation's tygoons, made his investments with Ambrose through a middleman in the local automobile business. Adonis heads the Automobile Conveying Co. of Cliffside, N. J., which hauls new vehicles from a New Jersey assembling plant to dealers along the Atlantic seaboard.

The second victim, Mannerfrid, was described by his local attorney, Truitt, as a careful businessman who went to the trouble of checking the credit standings of stamp dealers with whom Ambrose said he would do business, but did not check them on whether they actually were to participate in disposing of stamps procured by Ambrose.

Truitt said Mannerfrid had a letter on official Postoffice Department stationery stating specifically that the transaction—buying of rare United States stamp issues through Ambrose's connection and selling through dealers—was not

Bank Bandits Flee With $116,250 In Garbage Can

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Two men, carrying a garbage can between them, walked out of the Bank of Douglas today with $116,250, their haul in an early morning holdup.

Draped over the garbage can was a white cloth. The sight was just unusual enough to attract the casual attention of passersby but not sufficiently to alert anyone that a major holdup had occurred.

Inside the bank, seven persons were bound and jammed into a closet, unable to spread an alarm until other bank employes arrived at about 8 a. m., within 15 minutes after the bank robbers drove away in a car with California license plates.

Transit Fares To Go Up 2c In Maryland

Fares on Capital Transit Co. lines in nearby Montgomery and Prince Georges counties will go up from the present five cents per zone to seven cents per zone beginning at 12.01 a. m. Monday, February 20.

The 2-cent-per-zone increase, asked by CTC, was granted yesterday by the Maryland Public Service Commission in an order issued in Baltimore.

The PSC order is effective February 19, and the company said it would be put into effect the next day.

All of the 20 CTC routes in the Maryland counties are affected. Two lines have five zones, all others have four, or less, with each zone averaging about a mile and a half.

Thus, for a rider to Glen Echo on the streetcar fare will go from 10 cents (two zones at 5 cents each) to 14 (two at 7 cents). A bus rider to or from Kensington pays for three zones.

One of the two longest routes is that to Greenbelt. A rider from the District now takes a streetcar from Mount Rainier at the District line to Branchville—three zones—then transfers to a bus for two more zones. The total fare now is 25 cents and will become 35 cents.

Postal Boosts Get Tentative House Backing

Cost of One-Cent Card Doubled in Bill; Final Vote Due Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House yesterday tentatively approved about 130 million dollars in increased postage rates on postal cards, parcel post, special deliveries and second and third class mail.

Far short of what President Truman recommended to cut the 555-million-dollar postal deficit, the bill nonetheless ran into sharp opposition.

After tentative approval, critics forced postponement of the final vote until today by resorting to a parliamentary maneuver requiring reading of the engrossed (amended) copy of the bill.

A similar bill was recommitted for further study in the Senate on January 11.

First class letter mail and airmail are unaffected by the measure but the rate on postal cards and so called "drop letters" would be increased from 1 cent to 2, to raise $37,375,000 more revenue.

Increases in parcel post (fourth class) rates would apply on the first pound. The increases vary from 5 cents in the local zone, 4 cents in the first and second zones, and 3 cents in the third and fourth zones to 7 cents in the eighth zone.

Except in rural areas, the bill would cut down the size of parcel post packages from the present minimum of 70 pounds in weight and 100 inches in size (length and girth combined) to 40 pounds and 72 inches. A million-dollar increase in revenue was claimed for the parcel post rate changes.

Another 14 million dollars would be raised from increased rates on second class mail, affecting the great bulk of newspapers and magazines.

Free rural delivery privileges would be continued, however, for weeklies and small dailies inside the county where they are published.

By a vote of 114 to 70, a further second class mailing exemption was voted for some farm publications and for religious, scientific

Senate Bill Urges New D. C. Airport

Committee Backs $14 Million Project Outside Washington To End Congestion

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A bill to create a new airport for Washington was presented to the Senate yesterday with unanimous backing of the Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce. Committee Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) led the drive for committee action on the bill, which he introduced last year. He said he will seek early Senate approval for the measure.

Biggest push for the bill came after air crashes last fall at Washington National Airport. One took 55 lives, another six.

The bill leaves open the question of the airport's cost and its location. The cost for the first single-runway installation has been estimated at around 14 million dollars, and sites in nearby Maryland and Virginia have been studied by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Senator Johnson wants to see the airport located outside the "present congested Washington military and civil air pattern," on a four-lane highway, away from the Potomac River. Three of the prospective sites are near Shirley hwy., in the vicinity of Annandale, Va. Another is in Fairfax County, northwest of the District. Three are in Montgomery County, Md. One is in Prince Georges County.

Administration backing has been given the bill to locate the second major airport serving the National Capital near Washington, rather than relying on service from the new Friendship Airport 11 miles south of Baltimore.

Major aims of the new airport are to relieve congestion at National Airport and take care of a foreseeable increase in air traffic here.

The estimated 14-million cost would cover purchase of land, construction of buildings and an access road for a one-runway initial set-up adequate to handle the first

Harvard Faculty Condemns Clause In Reservist Oath

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 8 (AP).—The Harvard College faculty has adopted a formal protest against what—in Harvard circles—has been called "the stool pigeon clause" in the Naval Reservists' loyalty oath.

Capt. Carroll T. Bonney, head of a Naval Reservist organization at Harvard, said today that the faculty protest was being forwarded to the Chief of Naval Personnnel

Besides deposing that they do not belong to any organization on the Attorney General's list of "subversive groups," loyalty certificates require Reservists to state whether they have attended any meetings of such groups and, if so, to name fellow students whom they observed at the meetings.

Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Feb. 8 (AP).—An Air Force pilot reported today that all 10 men aboard a search plane survived a crash in the Yukon yesterday.

The plane disappeared while sweeping a rugged mountain region in the hunt for a C-54 transport lost since January 26 with 44 aboard.

UNDER ARREST—Diana Jean Johnson strolls through police headquarters corridor after telling authorities she witnessed the slaying of a Texas oilman last June

By Alfred Lewis and Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporters

A slender, baby-faced girl of 18 told the FBI and Park Police yesterday that she watched her husband kill a man in Texas. Then she tried to jump from a fifth-floor window of Police Headquarters.

The girl, Mrs. Diana Jean Johnson, was waiting to be arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence when she suddenly climbed on a chair and made for an unbarred window.

Police Matron Eleanor Phillips grabbed her, and several United States marshals in the room assisted Mrs. Phillips in dragging the girl away from the windowsill.

Mrs. Phillips said only the fact that the window was closed prevented the girl from leaping. She stood on the chair apparently to get at the window lock.

Last January 8, the girl was arrested by Park Police after she asked several people in Staunton Park the location of the Anacostia

Man Doomed In Md. Killings Wins New Trial

Thomas A. Edwards, who had been sentenced to hang for the Glen Burnie murders, was granted a new trial yesterday by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The court threw out the confession Edwards gave police and as a result struck down the death sentence ordered by three judges in Baltimore Criminal Court.

All of which means Edwards, husky 24-year-old sugar refinery worker, will stand trial again in the twin slaying of a young Glen Burnie couple, John H. Mahlan, 25, and Mary C. Kline, 18.

But at the next trial, the prosecution will have to seek to link Edwards with the pistol killings without the confession.

John Mahlan, postal clerk and war veteran, and Mary Kline, his pretty red-headed date, were shot

Bayonet Lunge Through Door Kills Wife

By Benjamin Bradlee

A 22-year-old veteran, discharged from the Army as "undesirable" last Friday, drove a war-souvenir bayonet through a door into the heart of his wife early yesterday morning after a wild party celebrating her twentieth birthday.

Mrs. Maytriss Williams Ramey was impaled, pinned on the bathroom door of her three-room flat at 744 6th st. se., with 10 inches of the bayonet blade in her back.

Her two babies, aged 2 and 1, slept undisturbed a few feet away as she died.

Appeal of Education Chief

'Shocking Disorder' in Schools Imminent, U. S. Aid Is Asked

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Steps must be taken now to secure an adequate supply of teachers and school buildings or the Nation's educational system "will fall into shocking disorder and ineffectiveness," the United States Office of Education said yesterday.

Commissioner Earl J. McGrath in his annual report warned that schools are in a condition that "no democratic social order can long condone." He said the need for Federal aid to education is "clear and imperative."

McGrath declared that the Nation, devoted to the idea of equal educational opportunity for all, "has not yet faced realistically the practical consequences of this philosophy—the cost in terms of teachers, buildings, textbooks—dollars and cents."

Unless present inadequacies are removed our national educational ideals will not be realized, he said.

Federal aid, he declared, will equalize educational opportunity for cildren in poor States with that offered in States with more wealth.

Thousands of classes now are taught by teachers who hold only emergency or temporary certificates, he said. In many communities the shortage of teachers has resulted in classes of more than 50 children. In others, education has been curtailed by dividing the school day into two sessions, one group of students attending in the morning and another in the afternoon.

He noted that "nothing can now be done to forestall the emergency crisis which will mean educational privation for many of our children." Only by facing the problem realistically can the shortage be materially reduced three, four or five years hence, he said.

U. S. Gesture To Russians Is Ruled Out

Acheson Says Peace Requires Strength In Threatened Areas To Prevent 'Fishing'

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson said yesterday that the only way to get peace was to create strength in place of weakness in threatened areas throughout the world. This was his answer to the appeals on Capitol Hill and elsewhere for a dramatic new approach to Russia.

He not only ruled out such an approach, but said he knew of no new American plan for the control of atomic energy, and saw no need of forming a Government-appointed group of private citizens to study the problems raised by the hydrogen bomb.

Weakness Is Invitation

Wherever a "situation of weakness" exists in Asia or Europe, he said, "it is not only an invitation, but an irresistible invitation for the Soviet Government to fish in those trouble waters."

"To ask them not to fish, and to say we will have an agreement that you won't fish, is like trying to deal with a force of nature."

"You can't argue with a river; it is going to flow. You can dam it up, you can put it to useful purposes, you can deflect it, but you can't argue with it.

"Therefore, we go to work, as I said, to change those situations of weakness so that they won't create opportunities for fishing and opportunities for trouble."

Long and Difficult Road

He conceded that this was a "long and difficult" road to travel, but he insisted that it was the only one, since agreements of the usual kind with Russia had been proven "impossible."

He chose his regular press conference as the occasion for an unusual statement of policy. He explained that he wanted to talk informally "on some thoughts which have come to me as a result of studying carefully two very arresting speeches which were made

2 G-Girls Burned In Early Morning Fire in Apartment

Two Government girls were burned, one severely, in a fire which broke out shortly after 1 a.m. today at 1323 Monroe st. nw.

Fireman rescued Maxine Wraalstad, 19, and Elenor Jermyn, 21, from their blazing first-floor apartment after Mrs. Arthur R. Dodge, proprietor of the house, gave the alarm.

Mrs. Vera Roeper, helpless with her leg in a cast, was carried out by firemen.

The fire was believed to have started in an overstuffed chair in the girls' apartment.

They were taken to Emergency Hospital by Rescue Squad No. 2 ambulance. Miss Wraalstad was burned on the face and head and upper chest. Miss Jermyn was slightly burned about the face and head.

Nurse Found Dead In Doctors Hospital

A nurses' aide was found dead last night in a rest room at Doctors Hospital.

Police said the cause of death of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Jones, 58, of 633 Morris pl. ne., was unknown. She was pronounced dead by Dr. Donald Thorn shortly after he battered down the door to a locked compartment in a third-floor ladies' lounge. The victim's husband, James Jones, a hospital houseman, said his wife had not been ill or under treatment.

To Save Fuel

Rail Service Ordered Cut; Steel Is Hurt

With railroads reported down to a two-week supply of coal, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday ordered a sharp reduction in coal-burning train services.

Effective at 11:59 p. m. Friday, the Nation's railroads must reduce their coal-burning freight trains by 25 percent, and their coal-burning passenger trains by 50 percent.

The impact of the coal strike began to hurt the steel industry.

Wheeling Steel Corp., at Wheeling, W. Va., reported a wholesale cutback in production because of coal shortages. The company announced its Benwood, W. Va. plant would be closed by Saturday morning, and that its coke production works at Steubenville, Ohio, would be reduced by 25 per cent.

In Detroit, General Motors declared that in a move to save "critical fuel," it was canceling its plans to expand normal production to include Saturday work and overtime.

Emergency furloughs were ordered yesterday for 65 percent of the 14,000 soldiers stationed at Chanute Air Base, Ill., in a coal-conservation move. The emergency three-week furlough goes into effect Friday. The base will discontinue all classroom activities today, and the base nursery, USO, sports area and officers' clubs will be closed.

FBI Teaches Sign Painter A Spy Lesson

Wrong to Impersonate ONI Officers, 'Secret' Film Owner Finds

A New York sign painter learned a lesson about espionage and counter-espionage yesterday. Namely, that it's not right to pose as an intelligence agent if you aren't one.

The FBI said Herman Axelbank, 49, of New York City, came to Washington with a strip of "secret microfilm" for sale to the Federal Republic of Germany for a neat $12,000.

Axelbank explained to FBI agents that the film contained scenes of German nationals who are prisoners of war in East Germany. He said he thought the German government might find it handy to identify the prisoners.

Explained Deal to ECA

Axelbank, the FBI said, first contacted the Economic Cooperation Administration. That was Tuesday.

Posing as a "Charles Norman" and an agent of the Office of Naval Intelligence, he explained his deal in full to ECA, the FBI continued.

ECA turned him over to a State Department aide. To the official, Alexbank explained his lack of credentials by saying that as an undercover agent for ONI behind the Iron Curtain who was going to carry around a lot of old credentials?

A second appointment was made for Axelbank today at the State Department. Invited as spectators were the FBI.

FBI Meets ONI

Axelbank: "I'm from the ONI."

Spectators: "That's fine. We're from the FBI."

At an arraignment later in the day before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, Axelbank explained he bought the films for $175. They were originally part of a newsreel, he said.

He was held in $1000 bond for the grand jury on a charge of impersonating a Federal officer.

Reopened Coal Parleys Break Up In Deadlock

T-H Injunction Appears Only Move Left for Truman As Negotiators Quit

BULLETIN

By the United Press

John L. Lewis and the soft-coal operators broke off negotiations early this morning, apparently leaving President Truman with no alternative but to seek a Taft-Hartley injunction aimed at stopping the mine strike for about 80 days.

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The President's fact-finding board politely but firmly shoved John L. Lewis and the coal operators into direct peace negotiations yesterday.

The maneuver had a two-fold purpose:

1. To test the loud and righteous protests by both sides of the dispute that they honestly want to bargain in good faith and arrive at a settlement.

2. To permit the three fact-finders to observe the sessions and see for themselves which side was to blame for the breakdown in collective bargaining in the coal industry.

Southern soft coal mine operators and representatives of the United Mine Workers recessed their talks late last night to join Lewis himself and the Northern and Western opertaors.

There was no hint whether this meant that progress toward a strike-ending contract had been made.

None of the parties would say whether they had made any progress or whether negotiations would continue today.

In accordance with the wishes of the board, John L. Lewis met with the spokesmen of the Northern-Western operators starting at 2 p. m. in the Statler, while other UMW officers sat down with representatives of the Southern producers at the Mayflower. The three fact-finders shuttling between the sessions as observers.

The board—Chairman David L. Cole, William W. Wirtz, and John T. Dunlop—after private sessions with the disputants on Tuesday, held a public hearing yesterday morning at an Interdepartmental Auditorium hearing room.

The chamber was jammed with newsmen, radiomen and photographers as Lewis, flanked by his lieutenants, ranged himself across the room from his chief adversaries—George Love, of the Northern-Western operators; Joseph Moody, of the Southern Producers, and Harry Moses, of U. S. Steel's coal subsidiaries.

Lewis Indifferent

For the first few minutes of the hearing, Lewis yawned and appeared indifferent while Love explained the position of his group. Then, Love charged Lewis with saying that he held the 400,000 soft-coal miners "in the palm of my hand!" At this point, Lewis jumped to his feet and roared: "That is a dirty, deliberate and infamous lie. . . . You're a liar by the clock."

Love said there were five main issues separating the operators and the miners, as follows: elimination of the "able and willing" clause, which permits Lewis to call out the miners at will; addition of a clause by which the union guarantees performance of the contract; restriction of welfare fund benefits to employes of participating companies; keeping the open shop clause within the limits of the law; keeping down the cost of coal.

The producers gave Lewis the

Red Plane Output 40-50,000 a Year, British Book Says

London (Thursday), Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Wing Comdr. Asher Lee said in a book, "The Soviet Air Force," published today, that the Russian aircraft industry, including factories in the satellite states and the Soviet zone of Germany, is producing between 40,000 and 50,000 planes a year.

"At the moment the Soviet air force does not have a long-range bomber which can carry the atomic bomb more than 1000 miles from its base," he said. The Russians could not bomb Washington or New York now, unless they acquire bases in Greenland, he added.

'Support' Eggs and Milk

U. S. Lays $100 Million More In Food on Giveway Counter

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam tossed another hundred million dollars worth of surplus food on the giveaway counter yesterday.

The Agriculture Department announced that 73 million pounds of dried eggs and 169 million pounds of dried milk can be had free by school lunch programs, the Bureau of Indian Affairs or any Federal, State, county, city or other local welfare agency, if they will pay the freight.

On December 31, the department said, it had 69 million pounds of dried eggs on hand, for which it paid $89,317,232, and 216 million pounds of dried milk, which had cost $27,399,459.

On this basis, the commodities thrown on the free list yesterday cost the taxpayers about 125 million dollars.

All were bought under the Government farm price support program in an effort to keep food prices high and farmers prosperous.

Yesterday's announcement was made in accordance with Section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, otherwise known as the Anderson Act. Unless the goods are claimed by the domestic welfare bodies to which they were offered yesterday, the Commodity Credit Corporation is expected to offer them soon, on the same giveaway basis, to privately-conducted domestic charitable agencies and to agencies such as CARE and CROP, which send free food to foreign countries.

Foley's Aide Is Witness

Miss Coplon Asked About Keys To Security Files, Court Told

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—A prosecution witness testified today that Judith Coplon, former Government girl on trial on espionage conspiracy charges, sought the location of keys to locked Government files containing internal security information.

The witness was Mrs. Margaret McKinney, secretary to William E. Foley, chief of the Internal Security and Foreign Agents Registration Sections of the Department of Justice Criminal Division.

Miss Coplon was employed under Foley as a political analyst

Mrs. McKinney testified that "some time in the middle of February, 1949," Miss Coplon came into her office and said there might be occasions when she would want to look at the files.

"She asked me if I would mind telling her where Mr. Foley keeps the keys," the witness said.

Mrs. McKinney said she told Miss Coplon where the keys to Foley's desk were. In the desk, she said, Foley kept the keys to the files.

"What was in the files?" Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan asked.

"The work of the Internal Security Section."

She said Foley was annoyed when Miss Coplon learned where he hid his keys, so he switched them to a new hiding place.

Foley testified yesterday that Miss Coplon once asked him about her chances of getting a post in the Central Intelligence Agency.

The agency keeps the President and other top-level officials informed on foreign intelligence matters.

Reds May A-Mine Harbors, Urey Says

Riders' Unit Seeks CTC Injunction

Transit Riders Association yesterday took to court its fight against radio broadcasts in Capital Transit Co. vehicles.

In a suit filed at District Court against CTC, the association asked for an "unconditional permanent injunction" to end transit radio broadcasting and the "aural aggression" it commits against transit riders.

TRA, which claims 450 members, has pending before the Public Utilities Commission a request for a rehearing on the transit radio question. PUC approved the broadcasts after hearings last fall. TRA joined with several other groups and individuals in seeking a rehearing, but is the first to take the matter to court.

The request for injunction contends CTC has a "contractual duty" to provide transportation "as quietly as possible."

Claude N. Palmer, temporary president of TRA, said the association will mee tonight at 8 o'clock in the District Building board room to decide on future actions and elect officers.

2-Cent Fare Hike Allowed

The Bradley blvd. line also extends five zones.

These fares are in addition to those paid while riding within the District.

The Maryland order has no direct effect on the petition pending before the District Public Utilities Commission asking for a fare boost on both cash fare and tokens within the city and elimination of the weekly pass. A pass was eliminated in 1947 in Montgomery County.

Yesterday's action by the Maryland PSC came only two weeks after a public hearing in Baltimore at which the State's people's counsel joined with eight Washington area residents in opposing the boost.

Capital Transit argued that the Maryland operations are losing $654,537 a year and that the recent arbitration award of wage boosts would raise the loss to $713,426. The two-cent fare boost, CTC estimated, would still be some $228,000 less than enough to wipe out the operating deficit.

The transit line asked the public utility body to put the increase into effect at once, but that was denied at the hearing last month.

Appearing in opposition to the boost at the time were Walter F. Mulligan of Berwyn, president of the Prince Georges County Civic Federation, and a number of other Maryland citizens and civic group spokesmen.

By The Associated Press

One of America's top atomic scientists told Congress yesterday that there is a real danger of Soviet tramp steamers' delivering A-bombs in United States harbors.

The warning came from Dr. Harold C. Urey, Nobel-prize-winning atomic physicist, along with an admonition that defense against such a threat should be erected "soon."

Testifying before a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee, Dr. Urey said he did not believe Russia had yet developed the hydrogen super-bomb—the so-called "hell" bomb that President Truman last week ordered developed by American scientists.

But he urged the Nation's defense leaders to be on guard against three possible dangers:

1. That Russia probably will have enough A-bombs by the end of 1950 to be "a great threat."

2. That Russia could "isolate" the United States by mining American harbors with atomic bombs slipped in by tramp ships.

3. That Russia will make "a serious move to alienate the western European nations" from the United States within the year.

Dr. Urey made these points in advocating an immediate convention of Atlantic powers to work toward a Federal union of Atlantic democracies—with the aim of building up "overwhelming strength" on the side of the Western Allies against Russia and her satellites.

He said he hopes scientists will be unable to explode a hydrogen bomb, but fears they will discover the secret.

"If the hydrogen bomb is developed to its maximum efficiency, there will be no place to hide," he said.

Former U. S. Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts told the Senate group that the threat of the H-bomb makes it imperative for Atlantic pact nations to unite in a federal union before it is too late.

Roberts joined Dr. Urey in support of a resolution by Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) urging President Truman to summon a conference of the pact members as the first step toward union.

But Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee, argued an attack on the United States would "strike out the keystone of an Atlantic union and it would collapse.

Justice Roberts, who is president of the Atlantic Union Committee, disagreed.

The retired jurist said diplomats have told him that if Russia pulls out of the United Nations, "half the other nations will pull out and climb a tree" to find a neutral position.

Access Plan Is Urged for Takoma Park

A nine-point program of highway improvements to provide better access to Takoma Park from the District was suggested last night by Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District Division of the American Automobile Association.

In presenting the suggestions to the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce at its meeting in Nelson's Restaurant, Cleveland agreed they could not all be implemented at once, but urged they be followed out in order of greatest priority, if accepted.

Cleveland's recommendations were: adjust the location of Blair rd. north of Cedar st. to reallign the intersection, channelize the intersection of Cedar st. and Carroll ave. and Piney Branch rd. and Eastern ave., cut Eastern ave. through between Willow and Cedar sts., rebuild the Van Buren st. viaduct to provide adequate roadway visibility.

Also, improve Sandy Spring rd. and Laurel and Whittier sts. to provide proper distribution of traffic, extend Van Buren st. to Eastern ave., close the Aspen st. viaduct and provide a suitable off-street terminal for J-2 and J-3 bus lines in the triangular park northeast of Eastern ave. and Laurel st.

Film Actress Held Guilty by Jury of Drunken Driving

Hollywood, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Film Actress Jean Wallace was convicted tonight of drunk driving and being drunk in a public place on Christmas Eve.

Miss Wallace

Miss Wallace, who had been charged with ramming another car while scantily clad, accepted the jury's verdict without show of emotion. She asserted arresting officers wanted her to be "nice" to them and booked her when she turned them down.

Municipal Judge R. Morgan Galbreth allowed Miss Wallace to remain at liberty on $100 bond and ordered her to appear Friday for sentencing.

Police records showed Miss Wallace was clad only in blue lace-trimmed panties and an overcoat when her car ploughed into a parked vehicle.

Patrick Dillon, who identified himself as an old friend of Miss Wallace, said the two arresting officers took turns sitting in the back seat of the police car with her for at least 40 minutes.

San Francisco, Feb. 8 (AP).—Harry Bridges swore today he never was a member of the Communist Party, that he never paid dues to the party, that he never signed an application to join.

The testimony in his perjury trial came late in the day after he had declared that Communists had helped finance but had not dominated or controled the critical 1934 waterfront strike on the West Coast.

"Democratically-minded longshoremen," he said, established policy, and he, himself, proposed the motion which provided that two working longshoremen from each dock (a total of about 50) should be elected to sit with an executive committee of about 25 to settle policy and run the strike.

Bridges, president of the CIO Longshoremen's Union, is being tried on charges that he swore under oath, at his 1945 citizenship hearing, that he was not and never had been a Communist. The Government says this was false.

Bridges, on the witness stand for the second day, conceded that the longshoremen accepted offers of financial and other aid by the Communist Party.

"We weren't fancy," he said. "We'd take money from anywhere we could get it. We even got some from the waterfront employers."

Big Mo's Data On Bay Buoys Was Mixed Up

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—When the battleship Missouri ran aground she had documents containing mixed information on buoy locations, a naval court of inquiry learned today.

As the court probing the grounding went into its fourth day of hearings, it heard a Naval Ordnance Laboratory technician testify discrepancies existed between a laboratory chart and Coast Guard notices to mariners.

And the officer of the deck on the Big Mo the day she grounded in Chesapeake Bay told the court he did not know until the ship sailed from Norfolk that she was to run a secret electronic recording range paralleling the main channel just outside Hampton Roads.

The ordnance laboratory technician, Wallace Taylor, testified today the Missouri would have been off the electronic range about 400 feet if her course had been plotted on the basis of buoy locations given in a notice to mariners published last December 7. He said a navigator would have gained "no idea" what the range buoys looked like from that notice to mariners.

On the other hand, he testified, a chart and instructions on the range which had been furnished the ship showed the correct buoy locations and described their shape and color.

Taylor explained that five buoys originally marking the range were removed in December and two new ones planted some 400 feet from the positions listed in the December 2 notice to mariners.

The judge advocate of the court, Lieut. Comdr. M. J. Bradbury, asked Taylor why the laboratory's instructions on the range contained a reference to the mariner's notice of December 2 rather than to a notice of December 7, which contained the revised locations of the buoys.

"I am afraid that was my error," Taylor said.

Bride Held With Holdup Suspects

MRS. DOROTHY GACH,

22-year-old bride, was arrested in Detroit yesterday with her husband and three other men for questioning by police and FBI agents about the $1,700,000 Brinks holdup in Boston. Her husband, John Gach, 35, is known to have been with Harry Fleisher of the Purple Gang in Cincinnati several months ago. A paper sack containing $37,000 in cash was found in their auto. They said it was won in a gambling game. All five were booked for suspicion of armed robbery

Big Liner Laid as GAO Hits Subsidies

Construction work on new ships for America's Merchant Marine went forward yesterday, despite a new blistering attack by Comptroller General Lindsay Warren on Maritime Commission subsidy practices.

The keel of the SS United States —70 million dollar superliner— was laid at Newport News, Va., as a 208-page General Accounting Office audit report on the commission was laid before Congress.

The report charged the Nation's subsidized steamship lines have enjoyed huge profits and that careless and probably illegal Government payments and accounting practices have been partially responsible.

Warren recommended that the Government in paying for national defense features of new ships should allow only for defense items which do not have commercial value. In both shipbuilding subsidy and special national defense features, for example, the Government is paying 42 million dollars of the cost of building the new superliner, while the States Lines pays 28 million dollars.

Christoffel Acquittal Asked as U. S. Rests

By The Associated Press

Defense counsel asked for a directed verdict of acquittal in the Harold Christoffel perjury retrial late yesterday, shortly after the Government rested its case.

Federal District Judge F. Dickinson Letts is expected to rule Thursday on the motion by O. John Rogge, chief of defense counsel, that the case not be given to the jury and that the judge free Christoffel.

Christoffel is charged with falsely telling the House Labor Committee he had never been a Communist, had no Communist connections and never knew Ned Sparks and Fred Blair—both described as Communists in Government testimony.

The last Government witness, Rauland de Mint, formerly a supervisor at the Wisconsin Gas & Electric Co., of Racine, Wis., told the jury that Christoffel "asked me if I would put Fred Blair on the payroll."

De Mint, now of Ashland, Wis., said he was business agent of a local at the Racine plant and, under a union contract, had the power to hire employes for the company. He said he had seen Christoffel, former president of Local 248 UAW-CIO, at the Milwaukee plant of the Allis-Chalmers Co., together with Sparks and Blair on several occasions.

Earlier, three other witnesses—John Oswald of Lake Mills, Wis., a farm equipment dealer; Mrs. Claire Merten of Milwaukee, and Arthur W. Zeltner, a detective on the Milwaukee police force—testified they had seen Christoffel associating with Communists.

Research Unit Head Named By Truman

By the United Press

William Webster, 49-year-old executive vice president of the New England Electric System, was named yesterday by President Truman as chairman of the Research and Development Board.

A native of Wellesley, Mass., Webster will succeed Dr. Karl T. Compton, former president of the Massachusetts Institute o Technology, who resigned recently.

The Research and Development Board is charged with development of new military weapons based on latest scientific information.

Japanese Bride Waits on Truman To Indorse Bill

Carrol L. Klotzbach was the happiest man in these parts yesterday, awaiting only the signature of President Harry S. Truman to bring his Japanese bride-to-be to this country.

A bill which Klotzbach has been working on since last June has passed both houses of Congress, and will be law as soon as the President signs it. It provides that Miss Mitsue Shigeno, 29, of Tokyo may become a permanent resident of the United States. The bill was necessary because the United States restricts immigration of Asiatics.

Klotzbach and Miss Shigeno are to be married in All-Souls Unitarian Church, climaxing a romance that began when he was assistant director of an American project in Japan. Klotzbach is staying at 1455 Belmont st. nw.

East Germans Form 'Gestapo,' Youth Unit

Rally Warning

Red Youth Unwelcome, Reuter Says

Berlin, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Thousands of cheering West Berliners rallied close to the Soviet sector today to hear their mayor, Ernst Reuter, warn that Communist youths will be thrown back if they try to invade West Berlin on Whitsunday.

"There will be no putsch and no coup d'etat," Reuter shouted into microphones which carried his voice to the crowd of about 15,000 and into the Russian sector. "We won't have to borrow tanks for this purpose. We will be able to handle it ourselves."

Reuter answered the Communist declaration today that 500,000 youths will "storm" West Berlin during the May 27-30 demonstration "whether American tanks are lined up or not."

Reuter said the Communists will not be able to use the Olympic Stadium, May 28, because West Berliners plan a football game there on that day.

As he spoke, high officials of the Western Allied military police and the West German police met in secret both in Berlin and Bonn to plot counter-measures against the threatened Communist march.

C-54 transports flew an infantry battalion from Munich to Frankfurt, where the doughboys went into simulated action.

The Russian "little" blockade of Berlin fell into the on-again-off-again pattern once more. Before noon more than 200 German trucks were lined up at Helmstedt, awaiting detailed Soviet inspection. But by midafternoon the Russians eased up, passing eight vehicles an hour.

By nightfall, the backlog had been reduced to about 60 trucks.

Berlin, Feb. 8 (AP). — Eastern Germany rolled the calendar back to 1933 tonight, creating a new Red Gestapo and drafting the young into a regimented organization like the old Hitler Youth.

The Volkskammer (People's Chamber) enacted both laws without a word of dissent.

The bill for a new ministry of state security to direct a secret political force with unlimited authority to arrest and imprison is modeled after Russia's own secret police, the MVD.

Henceforth, a boy or girl in the Soviet zone must be a member of the Free German Youth or will not be able to take part in sports, picnics, hikes, travels, certain school work and even in the choice of a profession.

By the language of the act, the youth also would be encouraged to become a gigantic internal spy ring, just as the Hitler Jugend was taught to tattle even on parents if they were anti-Nazi.

Walter Ulbricht, deputy prime minister, told the chamber the youth organization, now about three million strong, would have as its "sacred duty" the deepening of Soviet-German friendship and anti-Americanism.

High Officials Feared War Over Berlin, Even He Stopped Scoffing in '48, Clay Writes

ROYALL — He was jittery about Berlin
DOUGLAS — Would have stayed "up to . . . war"
SMITH — He saw Berlin as a "liability"
CLAY — Thought war possible, not likely

Some of the highest American officials feared war with Russia over the Berlin blockade, according to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, former military governor in Germany.

Clay tells of their nervousness in a new book, "Decision in Germany," published by Doubleday & Co. today. Among those he names are Kenneth Royall, who was Secretary of the Army, and Louis W. Douglas, Ambassador to London.

The book covers Clay's four years of service in Germany, culminating in the Soviet blockade.

The general writes that when the Russians made their first preliminary blockading moves, he reported his "concern" to Gen. Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff.

"I did not predict what course this action would take, though I did state that I was no longer adhering to my previous position that war was impossible and felt that we could no longer preclude such a possibility."

The general says his report aroused Washington, and "did lead to a speed-up in our preparations for defense," although he did not consider it an alarmist message.

"Test" Train Sidetracked.

On April 1, 1948, after the Russians had walked out of the Allied Control Council in Berlin, Clay had a teleconference with the Pentagon. He reported his intention of sending "a test train with a few armed guards on board across the border to see if the Russians would actually stop it by force or by sidetracking."

The train moved, and the Russians shunted it off onto a siding "where," the General now writes, "it remained for a few days until it withdrew rather ignominiously." But the episode apparently caused jitters in high places here.

"During the teleconference I thought I detected some apprehension on the part of Secretary Royall and his advisers that a firm stand on our part might develop incidents involving force which would lead to war," Clay's story goes on.

"Therefore I expressed my opinion that weakness on our part would cost important prestige and that if war were desired by the Soviet Government it would not be averted by weakness. I added:

"'I do not believe this means war . . . Please understand we are not carrying a chip on our shoulder and will shoot only for self-protection. I do not believe we will have to do so.'"

Hint of Moving Families

The Army Department hinted that American families should be moved from Berlin, but Clay turned down all such suggestions, saying any such evacuation was "almost unthinkable." And in answer to a further nervous message from Royall on April 10, Clay answered:

"If we withdraw from Berlin, our position in Europe is threatened. If America does not understand this now, does not know that the issue is cast, then it never will, and communism will run rampant. I believe the future of democracy requires us to stay . . ."

At least once more, when the West was about to introduce its own currency into Berlin on June 25, the Army Department suggested slowing down this move if there was any possibility that it would lead to war.

Again Clay had to answer: "We do not expect armed conflict . . . we [and the British] both realize desire of our governments to avoid armed conflict. Nevertheless we cannot be run over and a firm position always induces some risk."

In September, after the Soviet blockade and the Allied airlift had been at work for almost three months, Clay went to Paris for meetings with Secretary of State Marshall and other high officials. Again he insisted that the West must stay in Berlin; Marshal backed him up.

Clay now says he is convinced there would have been no trouble if Washington had approved his proposal, made on July 10, to send an armed convoy through the Soviet zone to the blockaded capital.

(A review of Clay's book will appear on the book page of The Washington Post next Sunday.)

3 Indo-Chinese States Obtain Recognition

Australia and Belgium yesterday recognized the three new governments set up by the French in Indo-China.

These were the first countries to follow the example of the United States and Britain, which on Tuesday granted full recognition to the new states of Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos.

Officials here hope that a parade of recognition by other countries will impress those nationalists in Indo-China who are still undecided whether to support the Western-sponsored regimes or the Moscow-supported movement of Ho Chi-minh in the northeastern part of the country.

However, the Associated Press reported last night from Sofia that Bulgaria had recognized the Ho Chi-minh regime.

Naval Bomber Sets Distance Flight Record

San Francisco, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—A Navy long-range Neptune bomber, capable of carrying an atomic bomb, completed a 5156-mile nonstop flight from an aircraft carrier in the Atlantic to Mills Field today after 25 hours and 57 minutes in the air.

The twin-engine P-2-V set a distance record for planes making a takeoff from a carrier.

A sister ship, the Truculent Turtle, flew 11,256 miles nonstop from Perth, Australia, to the United States in 1946 but took off from a strip.

From its takeoff on the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt off the coast of Jacksonville, Fla., the Neptune flew over Charleston, S. C., the Bahama Islands, the Panama Canal, up the coast of Central America, over Mexico to San Diego, then Los Angeles and finally San Francisco.

A Navy spokesman described the Neptune's hop as a "routine test flight" although it was admitted the purpose was to point up the Navy's ability to deliver an A-bomb from a carrier-based aircraft within a radius of 2500 miles.

Pilot of the Neptune was Commander Thomas Robinson, Preston, Idaho. The plane carried six other crewmen.

Queen Mother's Rug Draws Record Crowd

London, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—A record crowd visited the Victoria and Albert Museum today for the first showing of the needlework carpet made by the 82-year-old Queen Mother Mary.

Officials said 3000 persons, the greatest ever to view a single object at the museum in one day, appeared to look at the handmade rug, which will be sold for dollars to go into the British Exchequer.

Belgian Vote Set on Return Of Leopold

Brussels, Belgium, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Five years of deadlocked discussion ended today when Parliament gave final approval to a measure calling for a plebiscite on whether self-exiled King Leopold should be returned to the throne.

The House of Representatives voted 117 to 92 in favor of the bill which now becomes law. The Senate already had approved it.

The House voted, a triumph for the Social-Christian (Catholic) Party in face of strong Socialist opposition, meant 5,500,000 Belgian voters will be compulsorily called to the polls March 19 to answer yes or not to the question:

"Do you consider that King Leopold III should reassume his constitutional prerogatives?"

All the Social-Christian representatives and 12 of the 30 Liberals voted in favor of the bill. Socialists, Communists and the remaining Liberals opposed it.

Voters, in accordance with a last-minute Socialist-Liberal suggestion, will be reminded on their ballots that neither the monarchy nor the continuity of the dynasty are at stake in the plebescite, but merely the return of Leopold in person to the throne.

British Nearing Plans For A-Power Plants

London, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—The Supply Ministry expects to hand the government detailed plans for atomic-driven warships and power plants within two months, it was announced today.

Actual production of engines driven by atomic energy and the development of atomic power plants on land may start in about two years, it was estimated.

Bargaining Return Voted For France

Paris, Feb. 8 (NYHT).—Premier Georges Bidault's revamped government was assured tonight of at least another week in office when the National Assembly adjourned until February 16 after voting unanimous approval of a law restoring free collective bargaining.

Even this vote served as a warning to Bidault of trouble to come since the majority of the Radical-Socialists abstained. They are the only major government party now besides the premier's own Popular Republicans, after the resignation last week of the Socialist ministers.

The Radical-Socialists fear collective bargaining under the new law will result in inflationary wage increases and throw the budget out of balance.

Woman's Knee Injured When Auto Hits Bus

Mrs. Helen Anthony, 50, of Lawrence, Mass., suffered a possible fractured knee yesterday when an automobile in which she was riding crashed into a stopped bus on Rockville pike near Old Georgetown rd. at Montrose, Md.

The woman, was a passenger in an automobile driven by William E. Frazier, 30, of Hyattsville, Md. She was admitted to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda.

Frazier was charged by police with having no driver's permit and posted $11.45 collateral for appearance in Rockville Police Court today.

Sulfa Aids Half Leprosy Cases

Carville, La., Feb. 8 (AP).—About half the cases of Hansen's Disease (leprosy) at the United States Marine Hospital (leprosarium) here are being controlled by a sulfa drug derivative, the institution's superintendent reported today.

Dr. Frederick Johanssen, superintendent, said about 50 percent of the cases are being "clinically and bacteriorologically" controlled. The doctor explained this meant the disease is arrested from developing to its final and fatal stage.

"I don't mean that sulfone drugs cure them completely," he pointed out. "But in many cases the patient is cured to a point where he will not endanger other people."

The rule at Carville is that a patient must be cured to a point where he cannot infect others before being dismissed as an arrested case. The doctor said the rate of dismissal is not high.

For example, last year, the hospital dismissed 52 cases but six of these, including Mrs. Hans Hornbostel, were allowed to leave to go somewhere else for treatment.

Mrs. Hornbostel, wife of a retired Army major, contracted the disease in a Japanese prison camp during the war. The Hornbostels now live on Long Island, N. Y.

Auto Parts Heir Made Her Watch Vices, Wife Says

Santa Monica, Calif., Feb. 8 (AP). — Her millionaire husband forced her at gunpoint to remain in the room while he occupied a bed with two strange women, Mrs. Anita Lipton Warner testified in Superior Court today.

Mrs. Warner charges cruelty and nine counts of adultery in her separate maintenance suit against Thomas M. Warner, jr., son of the late auto parts manufacturer.

She seeks possession of his $240,000 home and all their community property. She said Warner is worth two million dollars.

Mrs. Warner testified the incident with the two women occurred on their first wedding anniversary in January, 1947. When she tried to leave the room, she said, he fired a shot into the ceiling.

C. ALDON JOHNSON — STANLEY ABBOTT

Missionaries held by Czechs

Prague, Feb. 8 (AP).—Two young American Mormon missionaries have been arrested by Czechoslovak police in Moravia on unspecified charges and all efforts by American officials to see them have failed, diplomatic sources said today.

The missionaries are Stanley E. Abbott, 23, of Lehi, Utah, and C. Aldon Johnson, 22, of Idaho Falls, Ida.

The Mormon Church—officially the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints—announced Abbott and Johnson disappeared under mysterious circumstances January 28 while traveling through Moravia to visit church members living near the Polish border. The church has been meeting with difficulties from Czechoslovakia's Communist government since last May.

Churchill, Attlee Open Stump Tours

London, Feb. 8 (AP). — Winston Churchill and Prime Minister Attlee began stumping tours for the February 23 election today, and illustrated their widely differing tactics as well as policies.

Churchill, wearing a bowler hat and waving a big cigar, gave Laborites the bitter side of his tongue at Cardiff, Wales, lashing them individually and as a party. He accused them of using the Nazi technique of "the big lie" in their campaign.

Attlee, in a folksy, soft-spoken speech at the little town of Watford, just outside London, mentioned no Conservative opponents by name. He stood on his party's record and said Britain had made greater strides toward recovery than any other nation since the war.

Tories Embarrassed By U. S. 'Support'

London, Feb. 8 (AP).—Two American Senators dropped a verbal hot potato into the middle of Britain's election campaign today.

The Senators—Smith (R., N. J.) and Ferguson (R., Mich.)—said in Washington that a Conservative victory February 23 would find Congress less likely to cut Marshall aid to western Europe. If labor is returned to office, they added, there probably would be a drastic slash.

"No comment," said Winston Churchill's Conservatives.

The predominantly Conservative evening Press failed to carry the story.

A spokesman at Labor Party headquarters was more communicative.

"Sounds like politics to me," he said.

Acheson Rules Out Any New Dramatic Approach to Soviet

in the Senate within the past week."

This was a reference to the speech by Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), which called for a fifty-billion-dollar program in exchange for agreement with the Russians, and to the subsequent proposal of Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.) for a new disarmament conference.

Basic Urge of Americans

The Secretary went on extemporaneously, and in a calm and quiet manner, glancing from time to time at a sheaf of handwritten notes.

The two Senate speeches, he said, "reflect probably the most basic urge of the American people, and the most basic objective of American foreign policy, which is the pursuit of peace."

"War cannot accomplish the purposes of a democracy," he declared. "It can only make the accomplishment of that democracy more difficult.

"I think it is fair to say in thinking about these speeches that they represent more the goal toward which we are striving than they represent instructions as to how to reach that goal. They deal with the end rather than the means toward the end.

"If we could reach our goal by agreement, of course that would be highly desirable and the simplest and easiest way to do it. But I think four years of experience have brought us the realization that that is not possible."

The Secretary then recalled the resolution adopted by 53 Nations at the last United Nations Assembly. He said this resolution called, among other things, for effective regulation of armaments and control of atomic energy — both of them discussed in the two Senate speeches.

"And yet," he said, "that resolution with those two items in it was voted against by the Soviet Union and by its satellite states—which indicates how difficult it is to get even agreement upon an objective as clearly desirable as those items would seem to be."

He described the Soviet government as purposeful and determined, but also as "highly realistic."

Can Adjust Self to Facts

"We have seen time after time that it can adjust itself to facts when facts exist," he declared. "We have seen also that agreements reached with the Soviet government are useful when those agreements register facts or a situation which exists, and that they are not useful when they are merely agreements which do not register the existing facts."

An example, he cited the easing of Soviet pressure when it came up against vigorous resistance in Berlin, Greece and Turkey.

"So it has been our basic policy to build situations which will extend the area of possible agreement—that is, to create strength instead of the weakness which exists in many quarters," the Secretary went on.

As illustrations, he mentioned the European recovery program, the economic rebuilding of Germany and Japan, the Point Four program for undeveloped areas, and the military aid program.

Toward the end of his talk the Secretary mentioned the hydrogen bomb without naming it. He said many people were rightly troubled "because of the possibility that there may be developed a new and very terrible weapon."

But, he said, "the fact that the results of war may be even more terrible in the future than they have been in the past does not change the facts that I have been discussing as to the difficulty of the road toward peace and the nature and direction of that road.

Must Be Calm and Steady

"All it means, but one of the great things it means, is that we must be even more calm and even more steady than we have been in the past, because the responsibilities and the consequences of not being calm and not being steady are even more terrible than they were before."

And he thought the American people should not let their "fine quality" of self-examination and self-criticism become self-reproach, for such an attitude "is apt to bring paralysis in the field of action where action is necessary."

Answering questions, he said the United States had been negotiating steadily with the Russians on the control of atomic energy until the Russians walked out of the one place where negotiations were going on—namely, the Atomic Energy Commission of the United Nations.

Baruch Plan Called Best

He said the so-called Baruch Plan of 1946 did not lend itself to being taken apart and put together again, and was the best plan that could have been devised for security.

He told another questioner it was neither necessary nor desirable to ask a Government-appointed group of private citizens to study the implications of the hydrogen bomb. For one thing, he said, he wouldn't know where to find qualified men who were not already working on this subject for the Atomic Energy Commission or elsewhere for the Government.

D. C. and Maryland Make Reciprocity Deal for Motorists

The District yesterday announced a reciprocity agreement with Maryland aimed at relieving interstate problems of auto registration.

Under the agreement, announced by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, cars owned by District firms but driven by and kept at the homes of Maryland residents, need no longer be registered in Maryland. They may be registered only in the District. The District will extend the same privilege to Maryland firms.

Wallace L. Braun, deputy director of Vehicles and Traffic, said there are no present plans for a similar arrangement with Virginia.

Chinese in 10 Red Cities Warned to Expect Air Raids

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists today warned teeming popualtions of the Red capital of Peiping and nine other cities to get ready for air raids.

The warnings blared from Nationalist radio stations—move away from power plants, shipyards, wharves, railroad stations, warehouses, factories, barracks and other military targets.

The Air Force dropped warning leaflets over two of the marked cities, Shanghai and Nanking, which already have felt the bombers' wrath.

Historic Peiping, ancient capital of China with is venerable buildings and temples, so far has been spared.

The Nationalists have been lengthening the airfield on Chushan, main blockade base 100 miles south of Shanghai, to handle heavy bombers.

U. S. Enters Texas, Okla. School Suits

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Federal Government today will ask the Supreme Court "to repudiate" the "separate but equal" doctrine in segregation cases involving the Universities of Oklahoma and Texas.

That doctrine, buttress of the segregated school systems, will be termed "an unwarranted deviation from the principle of equality under law" as "explicitly" written into the Constitution by the 14th Amendment.

A brief as a "friend of the court" is due to be filed today by Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman, on behalf of the United States, taking the side of the two Negro students in their legal battles with the State universities. The cases are due to be argued before the Court next month.

One of the students is G. W. McLaurin, an Oklahoma graduate student in education, who "is required to sit at a special desk set aside for him in the doorway" of the all-white classroom, who "may use the library but only if he takes his books to a designated desk in the mezzanine floor," who "may eat in the school cafeteria where he is served the same food as other students but only at a different time at a table specially set apart for his use."

Similar to Henderson Case

The other student is Heman Marion Sweatt who was excluded from the all-white University of Texas Law School and who has refused to apply for admission to a new law school set up for Negroes only.

The brief in these cases follows in general one filed last October in the Henderson case, involving segregation in a railroad dining car. This case also will be argued next month.

In the new brief, signed by Perlman and Philip Elman, special assistant to the Attorney General, the Government argues, in the words of an 1880 Court decision, that the post-Civil War Fourteenth Amendment was "designed to assure to the colored race the enjoyment of all the civil rights that under the law are enjoyed by white persons and to give to that race the protection of the general government, whenever it should be denied by the States."

Perlman Quotes Vinson

Perlman points out that Chief Justice Vinson in the recent decision overthrowing restrictive covenants declared that it was "clear that the matter of primary concern (in writing the amendment) was the establishment of equality in the enjoyment of basic civil and political rights and the preservation of those rights from discriminatory action on the part of the States based on considerations of race or color."

The Government argues that nothing in the amendment "supports the notion that facilities need be equal only in a physical sense," the position of the Southern States.

The brief points out that the "separate but equal" doctrine is derived from an 1896 court decision, the famous Plessy case. Now, the Government says, the court is asked by the two States "to place the seal of constitutional approval upon an undisguised species of racial discrimination."

If that is done, the Government contends, the Nation's enemies can be expected to "exploit" it, the ideals of the Bill of Rights "would be ridiculed as empty words" and the lag "between what Americans profess and what we practice would be used to support the charges of hypocrisy and the decadence of democratic society."

The brief quotes Justice Harlan's dissent in the Plessy case, decided against him 7 to 1:

"We boast of the freedom enjoyed by our people above all other peoples. But it is difficult to reconcile that boast with a state of the law which, practically, puts the brand of servitude and degradation upon a large class of our fellow-citizens, our equals before the law. The thin disguise of 'equal' accommodations . . . will not mislead anyone, nor atone for the wrong this day done."

Riot Marks Strike Of Tannery Workers

Gloversville, N. Y., Feb. 8 (AP).—Striking tannery workers and police fought it out today with rocks, lead pipes, clubs and tear gas bombs in a third successive day of strife in this glove-making area.

Two deputy sheriffs and a non-striker were injured in picket line fighting in front of the Karg Bros., Inc., plant in neighboring Johnstown, the largest tannery in the area.

About 100 pickets, including 15 women, and some 50 police were involved.

Three pickets, including the vice president of the striking Independent Leather Workers Union, were arrested, raising to 14 the number arrested in the past two weeks.

The clash marked the fifth outbreak of picket line violence since 17 tanneries reopened January 25, after a shutdown of more than six months in a wage dispute.

Cabbie Says City Heads Exceed Power

The constitutionality of the District Commissioners' power to revoke hackers' licenses and vehicle licenses yesterday was questioned in an injunction suit filed in District Court yesterday.

The suit was filed by Attorney Louis Jongbloet in behalf of Frank Del Monte, 33, of 2913 N. Upland st., Arlington, Va.

It said Del Monte, driver owner of three cabs, was fined $50 in Municipal Court last December 30 on charges of soliciting riders.

A new trial was asked, the suit said, and pending argument on the motion, it said, Del Monte received a summons from the District Board of Revocation and Review of Hackers Identification Licenses to appear January 30 "to show cause why your public vehicle license should not be suspended or revoked." The suit asserted the findings and rulings of the board are to be handed down today.

SNAPSHOT FIGURES IN DAMAGE SUIT—After members of a District Court jury saw this picture yesterday, they said nay to a suit for $75,000 damages brought by Frederick R. Wilson against Robert A. Dixon, a driver for Embassy Dairies, who operates a farm in Mitchellville, Md. Wilson, a Washington attorney, charged that Dixon sold him a mare named Nancy, guaranteed to be gentle enough to "be suitable for even a baby to ride," and that later the horse "reared and fell upon" him, causing "permanent injuries." Dixon's lawyers called in an Army equestrian expert and used this picture to prove Dixon was not to blame

Coal Talks Are Reopened

"willing and able" clause, Love said, with the intention of giving the union protection against suits under the Taft-Hartley Act, but did not mean to give Lewis control over production through application of the three-day week.

Although Lewis himself did not confirm the statement, Love indicated that Lewis wanted "compensating, balancing equities" in return for modifying or eliminating the "able and willing" clause. Lewis said that the UMW was ready and willing to negotiate each and every item in the old contract as well as suggested new clauses.

Both sides blamed each other for "roadblocks" in the collective bargaining. Lewis charged that the operators decided long ago to sit tight and wait for the Government to drive the miners, like "convicts" back into the pits through the use of the Taft-Hartley "yellow-dog" injunction.

Chairman Cole wondered aloud whether the agreement could be quickly reached if both sides really wanted to resolve the conflict. Sure, in an hour, retorted Lewis. But Harry Moses of the steel-owned mines commented for the record he was not so optimistic. And Love, of the Northern-Western group, warned the fact-finders not to get their hopes too high for quick settlement.

It was at this time that the board recessed for a few minutes and came up with the request that the disputants meet again in direct bargaining sessions at 2 p. m.

The board, created under the "national emergency" provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, was set up Monday by President Truman, and went into action Monday night. It is under instructions from the President to report the facts of the coal dispute by Monday. With the report, the President will be empowered to seek a court injunction ordering the striking soft coal miners back to work for 80 days.

Meanwhile, at Miami Beach, where the American Federation of Labor is holding a session of its executive board, President William Green predicted that the coal miners probably will disobey any court injunction issued under the Taft-Hartley law. Green is a onetime official of the United Mine Workers.

Steelworkers Union Gives Miners $500,000

Philip Murray, head of the CIO and the Steelworkers and a former official of the United Mine Workers, yesterday sent a Steelworkers' check of half a million dollars to aid the striking miners and their families. He promised more financial assistance would be sent later.

During the month-long steel strike last year, John L. Lewis, head of the Mine Workers, proposed that nine AFL unions join the UMW in putting up a million-dollar weekly kitty to aid the Steelworkers, but nothing ever came of the suggestion.

Dental Society Nominates Rath for Board

Members of the District of Columbia Dental Society have named Dr. Walter A. Rath as their first choice for appointment to the District Board of Dental Examiners.

A vacancy will be created July 1 by the expiration of the five-year term of Dr. Joseph R. Palkin, secretary-treasurer of the board.

In winning the recommendation, Dr. Rath received 125 votes.

Second and third place candidates, chosen at the society's February business meeting, were Dr. Charles Basseches of 4123 Connecticut ave. nw., with 42 votes, and Dr. Thomas A. O'Connell of 5917 14th st. nw., with 21 votes.

Dr. Rath will be recommended to the District Commissioners who, however, can ignore the recommendation and reappoint the outgoing board member or anyone else they may choose.

The five-member board is an official body of the District government for examining and licensing dentists and dental hygienists, and for regulating the practice of dentistry here.

Area Couple Defendants In Tax Evasion Case

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP). — A tax evasion case against an Alexandria man and his wife got under way in Federal District Court here today. Defendants are David Crockett and Lauretta Crockett.

The Crocketts are accused of concealing more than $76,000 of their income to avoid payment of some $21,000 in Federal income taxes while they operated a tourist camp, the White Owl Inn, near Alexandria, between 1942 and 1945. They pleaded not guilty to four indictments against them.

School Board Chided on Sex Education

The Board of Education seems doubtful that sex is here to stay, the executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society charged yesterday.

Both the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers and "numerous well-trained teachers" favor sex education in Washington schools, Ray H. Everett told 200 cheering members of the society at its annual luncheon at the Y. W. C. A.

"But," he said, "as the principal of one of our largest high schools commenter, 'We can't go ahead until Franklin School gives us the green light!' Sometimes it seems as if our Board of Education doubts that the institutions—sex and the family—are here to stay."

Franklin School houses the administrative offices of the Board of Education and school officials.

Everett also announced results of a recent survey here showing that, as far as prostitution is concerned, Washington is "one of the cleanest large cities in the United States."

Feature of the program was a panel on "Washington's Sex-Crime Situation." Participants were Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital; United States District Attorney George M. Fay, and James V. Bennett, director United States Bureau of Prisons.

The Nation's socalled "wave of sex crime" has been considerably exaggerated by the newspapers, Overholser said.

Nevertheless, he said, many sex offenders escape prosecution when the complaining witness is a child because the family doesn't want to subject the child to "open court." The juvenile court system might be extended to handle this problem, he suggested.

St. Elizabeths has 20 patients who have been sent there in the 20 months' operation of the Miller Act, Overholser disclosed. The act provides for commitment of sex psychopaths. One of the 20 was arrested for forgery, another for stealing before it was discovered they were a homosexual and peeping-Tom, respectively.

None of the 20 has yet been re-released to the District Attorney for prosecution, said Dr. Overholser, who added he was "acutely aware" he has to certify the offender won't be a threat to society before he signs the release.

Phone Talks Get Nowhere as Disputants Spar

Wage negotiations between the telephone company and two union divisions representing some 6000 local employes "didn't get anywhere" yesterday, a union leader said. A company spokesman agreed.

Discussions appear to be deadlocked over the refusal of both sides to show their hands in the dispute.

The union has "no intention of specifying wage demands" until the company indicates a willingness to grant some increases, a union leader said.

On the other hand, the company isn't indicating its position, an official said yesterday, because the union has failed to make specific proposals, in five negotiating sessions thus far.

The two union divisions, which met Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. negotiators separately from 2 to 4 p. m. yesterday, have further sessions scheduled today and Friday.

Division 50, which includes 2500 operators and clerks, will hold its sixth meeting with company representatives at 10 a. m. today. Negotiations between the company and Division 36, with 3500 plant and commercial employes, will resume at 10 a. m. Friday.

Meanwhile, the Communications Workers of America (CIO), the telephone workers' parent union, used the first day of the truce in a Nation-wide strike threat to attack the telephone companies' newspaper advertising.

Joseph A. Beirne, union president, asked the Federal Communications Commission and all State utility regulating commission to rule on whether "anti-union advertising" is "a properly allowable operating expense to be paid for by the phone-using public."

President Truman was reported ready to step into the controversy unless agreement is reached before the February 24 strike deadline.

Girl in Slaying Case Tries to Kill Self

* * * * * * *

W. A. (TEX) THORNTON
Texas slaying victim

Bridge, so she could commit suicide.

Only last Sunday she indicated to police that she knew, in detail, of the murder June 22 of W. A. (Tex) Thornton. But it was not until yesterday, after her second arrest, that her story was believed.

Thornton, a fabulous oil-field trouble-shooter and dynamite expert, was found choked and beaten to death in an Amarillo, Tex., tourist camp. A lookout was ordered for Mrs. Johnson and her husband, Ewald A. Johnson.

Yesterday an Associated Press story quoted Amarillo police as saying that Park Police Chief M. H. Rasberry believed Johnson was in Washington and would be picked up soon.

Charged on 3 Counts

Mrs. Johnson's confession to Park Police, received after only five minutes' questioning, asserted that she saw her 29-year-old husband beat Thornton.

"I saw a lot of blood," she is reported to have said.

As a result of the confession, three separate criminal actions were taken yesterday:

1. Amarillo authorities charged the Johnsons with murder.

2. She was ordered held under $20,000 bond, in the first of two arraignments before Commissioner Lawrence, for transportation of a stolen car across State lines.

3. In the second arraignment she was held on an additional $20,000 bond for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for the crime of murder.

Mrs. Johnson's statements described not only the murder but her escape from her husband in Kansas—she said she feared him—and the cross-country hitch-hiking tour to avoid arrest which brought her here.

The history of her contacts with police in the two months of her stay in Washington tell how she was first sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation. Then how on Sunday she came to Park Police to tell them of a "girl friend" whose husband had killed a man—a "girl friend" who was "almost insane with worry." Finally, how details and descriptions given in this interview led officers to believe what they originally thought a "crazy" story.

This is her story of the murder:

Given Lift by Victim

She and Johnson, whom she married in 1947, were hitchkiking as itinerant workers through New Mexico when they met Thornton. The oilman gave them a lift and all three went to the tourist camp near Amarillo.

Thornton and her husband were in one room of the two-room cabin; she was in another. The two men had been drinking.

"Then I went out to the car to get some clothes," she said. "I heard a lot of noises and I went into the room where the two men were."

Johnson was beating Thornton, who seemed unconscious. The two drove away in Thornton's car.

(When Thornton was found, he had no money. His diamond ring was gone).

At Dodge City, Kans., Johnson left to get some food. While he was away, she got a ride in a truck.

Wandered Through South

She roved through the South. In Tampa, Fla., she said, Johnson caught up with her and she fled from him again. Police do not believe this part of her story.

She came to Washington December 12. She told of getting a job as stenographer in a lawyers office. But police said she had several male friends, one of whom was paying for the basement apartment in the 1200 block of 11th st. nw., where she was arrested. She had no money when she was booked.

The attractive, blonde girl said her home was in Los Angeles.

At her arrest January 8 she had a birth certificate and union card identifying her as Linda Wouri of California, police said.

That identification was one of the "stops" linking her with the sought-after Johnsons.

The "girl friend" she described Sunday, police said, meets her description. The description of Johnson she gave was so exact that it demanded further checking.

Present at both the Sunday interview and her commitment to Gallinger Hospital was Pvt. Porter Beale. He and Pvt. Philip C. Kimball picked her up Tuesday night.

Apparently recognizing Beale, she asked him anxiously:

"Have you any information for me on my friends the Johnsons?"

Bodies 26 Miles Away

Mahlan's blood-spattered car was found almost immediately, in a bean patch a few miles from Glen Burnie. But the bodies were not discovered until three days later, and they were about 26 miles away in a clearing near Annapolis.

Two months later, police announced Edwards had confessed to the slayings. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to hang. The Supreme Bench of Baltimore denied him a new trial.

However, the Court of Appeals six judges, sitting at Annapolis, were unanimous yesterday in holding that Detective Capt. Henry J. Kriss of Baltimore induced Edwards to relate a detailed statement of what happened that night of the Glen Burnie murders.

In the statement, Edwards said he shot Mahlan in wrath because Mahlan tried to run him down with a car. Then he said he shot Miss Kline because she screamed and unnerved him.

Shown Letter

But, wrote Judge Stephen R. Collins, Kriss persistently urged Edwards to "tell the truth." And Kriss displayed to Edwards a letter purportedly written to him by a convict in the Maryland Penitentiary.

The letter expressed sorrow at having failed to follow the advice of Kriss in the past.

Both the words of Kriss and the letter "constituted in fact a statement to the appellant (Edwards) by the officer that it would be better for appellant to tell the truth," Judge Collins said.

"This statement was such an inducement as to make the confession involuntary on the part of the appellant and therefore inadmissible.

"It is evident that this letter made some impression on Edwards because although Captain Kriss did not at first testify that he showed this letter to Edwards, the appellant distinctly remembered it when he testified."

Hard-Fought Battle

State's Attorney James C. Morton of Anne Arundel County, who headed the staff that prosecuted Edwards, was not available for comment.

The ruling was a victory for former Circuit Judge William J. McWilliams, one of the two court-appointed defense attorneys.

Although he will receive a fee of $100 or less, McWilliams worked tirelessly for a year to obtain a new trial for Edwards, declaring police have yet to solve the double killing.

McWilliams, who expressed "great satisfaction" with the decision, has termed the case "the most sensational and the most inept criminal investigation in the history of Anne Arundel County."

In arguing the appeal January 19, McWilliams urged the judges "to scrutinize the evidence closely." He insisted the confession should never have been admitted in evidence at the trial and that it did not coincide with evidence turned up by Anne Arundel County police.

Other Papers Inadmissible

The Court of Appeals also ruled inadmissible two other alleged confessions; a verbal statement by Edwards in his cell to Police Sergt. James H. Butler and a transcription of remarks made by Edwards in a police car going over the 26-mile route of the death car.

Three days before Christmas, McWilliams made public an anonymous letter he received from a pair of self-styled "Tennesseeans" stating they had committed the murders.

State's Attorney Morton said later this "confession," mailed from Baltimore, "appears to have no merit or significance." No investigation into the letter was made.

illegal or violating any departmental regulations. The letter was signed by Ambrose as special assistant to the Postmaster General.

The third loser, Livie, is the head of the Motor Sales Co. in Baltimore, a large auto agency. He also own the Bobanet Horse Stable, which races horses at tracks throughout the East.

Livie refused to discuss the stamp deals last night, bnt admitted readily that he had known Ambrose for some time.

Here is how the scheme was described to Mannerfrid, according to his attorney, Truitt:

Ambrose said he was able to purchase stamps—issues withdrawn from sale at postoffices, and faulty issues containing errors resulting from poor printing. He said such stamps had high value, and could be resold readily to stamp collectors.

Ambrose declared he had several experienced dealers ready to market such materials, but he needed cash to operate with. He offered Mannerfrid a chance to put up the operating capital in return for 50 percent of the profits.

Truitt pointed out, with a laugh: "So far as I know, Ambrose never bought a three cent stamp."

They Paid and Paid

Truitt said Ambrose used cash obtained from one investor to pay off an earlier one, and so the operation went until the collapse last month.

The attorney said he was retained to try to recover some of the losses.

"I have no real hope of recovery, though, although it is possible," he declared.

The entire operation is being investigated by a team of inspectors operating under Col. Richard E. Eggleton, inspector in charge of the New York area.

Eggleton said he has talked with all the "participants" and had received strong cooperation. "They were very willing to discuss it in the hopes that there would be some recovery of their losses," he reported.

Ambrose Telephones

Ambrose telephoned Colonel Eggleston at 8:30 a. m. yesterday to announce that he had returned to Washington. Earlier, he told the Postoffice Department official that he "hopes to make restitution."

Eggleston said his report would be presented to Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson in a week or 10 days, and then may go to the Attorney General's office, if prosecution is indicated.

The chief inspector of the Department, Clifton C. Garner, said Ambrose's operations probably involved more than $400,000, "but some of this may have been paid off."

Garner confirmed earlier reports that Ambrose spent some time at the race tracks. "But now he says he has no money," he stated.

Family at Home

Ambrose was in seclusion yesterday. His wife and five children returned with him to the modest duplex apartment at 4701 31st st. S. in Fairlington, early in the morning, but Ambrose and his wife, the niece of the wife of Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), left for Washington.

Ambrose conferred with his attorney last night and decided not to discuss the case. Earlier he told the United Press:

"I am going to tell my side of the story some day and when I do, it will be a good one."

Postoffice Department associates said Ambrose was "obsessed" with the idea of becoming a millionaire. He frequently told friends of his luck at Havre de Grace and other Maryland race tracks.

But his good fortune began to peter out several months ago. He approached several stamp dealers, offering to sell a sheet of "Win the War" commemorative stamps autographed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt for $2500 to $3000. No takers were reported.

Started in 1933

Ambrose entered the employ of the Postoffice Department in 1933 at a $2400 a year salary. His relative by marriage, Senator O'Mahoney, then First Assistant Postmaster General, helped him obtain the appointment.

But from then on, according to the Senator, Ambrose went up on his own, finally achieving a $10,000 a year spot in the public relations section of the department. In some years he was a speech ghost writer for departmental bigwigs, although the present Postmaster General declared Ambrose wrote no speeches for him.

Early last month Ambrose came to Senator O'Mahoney and said he was "in a jam." The Senator sent him to Postmaster General Donaldson, who promptly asked for his resignation, accepting it January 11 "with prejudice," which is tantamount to removal, according to Donaldson.

Donaldson said Ambrose did not purchase any stamps "to my knowledge." Ambrose had no access to stamps, other than those available to any customer at the department's philatelic agency, which caters to stamp collectors, Donaldson emphasized.

Suspect Held In Series of Purse Thefts

At least 15 purse-snatchings were solved with the arrest Tuesday night of Spencer McGruder, 24, 1433 W st. nw., police said yesterday.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence held McGruder under $15,000 bond yesterday for action of the grand jury.

McGruder was arrested at 15th and Chapin sts. nw., Tuesday night, a few minutes after Mrs. Margaret M. Schaffer, 58, of 1630 Fuller st., reported her purse, containing $1.52, had been snatched near her home.

At police lineup yesterday, McGruder admitted taking Mrs. Schaffer's purse and 15 others, police said. He also admitted several other victims who had been unable to identify him, according to police.

A series of unsolved purse snatchings have been reported during the last eight weeks in the Meridian Hill area. Police said they think McGruder is involved in as many as 30 cases here and elsewhere.

H-Bomb Decision Like Nazis' Path, Soviet Radio Says

London, Feb. 8 (AP). — Moscow Radio, commenting on President Truman's decision to make the hydrogen superbomb, said today the United States is following "the path pursued by the vanquished Nazis."

At the same time, however, the broadcast in English heard here spoke of the possibility of "peaceful competition" between the Soviet and capitalist systems and held out an implied invitation to the United Staates to step up trade with Russia.

The broadcast said there was "widespread opposition in the United States" to the H-Bomb project.

It accused the Truman Administration of pushing the country into an "unbridled arms drive" but said the "forces of peace now have every possibility to subdue the forces of war."

Accusing United States "ruling circles" of creating an anti-Soviet trade boycott, the broadcast said Russia can build up her economy in spite of it.

Group Hits State Bill On Auto Inspections

Annapolis, Feb. 8 (AP).—The State should stay out of the automobile inspection business and leave it to private garages, a House Committee was told today.

A Washington County delegation, mostly fruit farmers, opposed in present form a bill to resume compulsory inspection of auto vehicles in Maryland. They called it "socialistic," costly and inconvenient.

They told the House ways and means committee they were heartily in favor of renewing inspection. But they objected to the bill's plan to have it done by the State.

"We do favor inspection by auto repairmen," said Van Itnyre of Smithsburg, leader of the group. "But we are opposed to spending several million dollars under a State inspection system." The bill calls for private garages to resume auto inspection, until May 31, 1951. After that it would be done at State-operated inspections for which $2,500,000 would be provided.

Committee Chairman Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges) estimated that the proposed $1.50 fees for semi-annual inspections would pay for the stations "in five or six years."

Itnyre, who said he represented 500 members of the Washington County Grange, objected to the inconvenience of driving to one State inspection station. In general, they objected to more "regimentation" by the State and "taking business away from the garages."

The system "takes no work away from the private garages," replied Pumphrey. "The repairs will not be made by the State inspection stations. They'll just find out what's wrong."

Doctor Lee Honored by Heart Group

Dr. Thomas S. Lee, District cardiologist and professor of cardiology at Georgetown University, last night was named honorary president of the Washington Heart Association.

Dr. Lee, who helped found the association 25 years ago, was honored at the first of a series of monthly meetings on heart and circulatory diseases at the Medical Society Building under the association's sponsorship.

Guest speaker was Dr. William A. Stround, Philadelphia heart specialist, who recommended "the judicious use of alcohol" in treating coronary artery diseases.

"It helps relieve pain by dilating the vessels of the heart," Dr. Stround said.

Small Fry Need Control, Is Warning

"Exclusive concentration on the fabulous king-men of crime may tend to divert public attention from local racketeers and muscle-men."

This statement came yesterday from Carl H. Chatters, executive director of the American Municipal Association, a group representing thousands of American cities at next week's national crime conference here.

Chatters told The Washington Post from his Chicago headquarters that "recognition of the national crime networks must be coupled with this kind of slogan—'There may be a Frankie Costello in your own home town. Nail him.'"

Costello, big-time tygoon with headquarters in New York, has repeatedly been described as head of a Nation-wide gambling syndicate, a charge he has denied.

Two top AMA officials will play a big part in the crime conference, called by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath for next Wednesday at the Justice Department. One is Denver's Mayor Quigg Newton who will act as temporary chairman. The other is New Orleans' Mayor deLesseps Morrison, who will be AMA's spokesman.

"Action now against organized crime is imperative by all branches of Government," he said. "The time is ripe. But the value of current publicity about syndicate big shots may be wasted unless we work together."

Chatters said that "even in cities with little or no organized crime problems, there is increasing awareness that the best preventive medicine against the rackets is cooperative action to smash them where they now thrive."

Ex-Commissioner Opens Restaurant On N. Y. Ave. N.W

George E. Allen, former District Commissioner and a friend of President Truman, has opened a restaurant here, it was revealed yesterday.

Allen is principal stockholder in the Howard Johnson restaurant in the 1400 block New York ave. nw., Erwin E. Reynolds, his secretary said. Second principal stockholder, he said, is Frank Andrews, manager of the Hotel New Yorker in New York.

Reynolds had no comment on a report that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is another stockholder. The secretary did say that Allen is considering opening other Howard Johnson restaurants here.

Allen is treasurer of the Democratic congressional committee. He formerly managed the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels, of which he is still a director.

3 Escape Injury In 25th St. NW. Apartment Fire

Three persons, including an 80-year-old invalid and a 10-month-old baby, narrowly escaped injury yesterday when fire broke out in their apartment house at 1122 25th st. nw.

The invalid, Mrs. Mary N. Rabbitt, was carried from her first-floor apartment by her brother, Wade Harris.

Mrs. Virginia Fisher, 30, and her infant daughter, Virginia Lee, were led down a fire-escape from the third floor after smoke blocked the staircase. The rescue was made by Pvts. C. S. Atnipp and R. A. Jacobs of No. 2 Truck Company.

Flaw Voids County Bill, To Be Redrawn

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Feb. 8—That legislative flaw that threw out Maryland's 50-million-dollar school bond issue has cropped up again in a Prince Georges County bill.

Perry O. Wilkinson, county delegation chairman, said today his group will introduce a bill soon to reenact a water bond issue bill "passed" by the 1949 General Assembly. The bill passed the House of Delegates, but did not receive a third reading in the Senate.

Legality of the act, under these circumstances, has been questioned by the New York bonding firm which is preparing to issue $9,863,000 in Washington Suburban Sanitary bonds. Attorneys for the firm have pointed out that under exisiting statute (exclusive of the 1949 measure), the commission would only be empowered to issue five million dollars in bonds.

Effect of the bill introduced last year was to take out two million dollars in water bond sinking funds from the debt limit set by the commission. Since the sinking funds are self-liquidating, the measure was intended to add the two million dollars to the borrowing power of the commission.

In their letter to the Prince Georges delegation, the bonding journal entries showing passage firm stated that the "defect in the of the act is clearly a clerical error on the part of the journal clerk of the Senate" and asked that the bill be reintroduced. Wilkinson said the delegation would press for its passage on the grounds of both emergency and general public welfare.

U. S. Coins Found In Good Shape in Annual Inspection

Philadelphia, Feb. 8 (AP). — America's coins underwent a careful study today and were found to be in good shape.

That was the word from President Truman's assay commission, which gave America's small change the once over today.

It's an old custom, this survey of coins. It was started 158 years ago by Alexander Hamilton, the Nation's first Secretary of the Treasury.

Every year since then, 12 citizens selected by the President have made a study of the pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, halves and silver dollars of the United States.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the mint here, greeted the commission members, consigned to assay, count and weigh the coins.

They made no formal report before the conclusion of the study, but the commission members were in agreement the coins looked and felt pretty good.

Bill to Double Exemptions on Tax Offered

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Senate Minority Leader Kimble (R., Allegany) today called for the biggest slash yet in Maryland's income tax.

Kimble quietly introduced a bill to double everyone's personal exemption from $1000 to $2000. A married couple could thus subtract $4000 from combined earnings before figuring how much to pay the State each year. Kimble estimated the saving to taxpayers under his proposal at seven million dollars to eight million dollars a year. Of this, married couples would keep all but about $2,500,000 Kimble said.

Lane Plan Still Studied

Kimble submitted his exemption-doubling measure while a special minority committee continued to probe Governor Lane's proposed 143-million-dollar budget for tender spots.

The Governor has recommended doubling the personal exemption only for persons 65 and older. He also favors hiking dependents' deduction to $600. With another proposal to cut the rate of the first $500 of small annuities and investment returns from 5 to 2 percent, the administration measures would save taxpayers an estimated $1,250,000 a year.

The Senate also received a proposal by Senator Stromberg (D., Howard) that the State seize strike-bound utility prants. Stromberg's bill would let the State take over after a five-week cooling-off period.

The Governor could insist first on management-labor negotiations, then ask arbitration on remaining differences. Should this fail, he could investigate the dispute and if a shutdown would endanger "public health, safety or welfare," the State would take over the plant.

Also proposed today was an $89,998,800 veterans' bonus by Senator Phoebus (R., Somerset). He said he and Senator Goldstein (D., Calvert) planned to introduce the measure in the Maryland Legislature Thursday. Phoebus said the legislation would be backed by a bond issue.

Prince Georges Leaders Favor 'Home Rule,' Survey Shows

The proposed streamlined "home-rule" government for Prince Georges County met with general approval from civic leaders in a survey yesterday by The Washington Post.

"Anything will be better than what it is now," was part of the reaction.

But also the proposals were, for the most part, praised as specifically good measures.

Under a bill introduced Tuesday in the Maryland Legislature the power to make purely local laws or "ordinances" would be delegated by the Legislature to the county commissioners. In general the Legislature's role in local matters would be changed from "parent" to "watchdog."

Nicholas Orem, jr., College Park, Md., president of the county chamber of commerce, said he believed the proposed bill would "greatly increase the efficiency, effectiveness and economy" of the county government.

Broader Powers Urged

He added: "Since the responsibility for county government is in the hands of the county commissioners they should be permitted broader powers for passage of county ordnances and local legislation rather than having to wait until a session of the Legislature to drag detailed matters to Annapolis."

A number of civic leaders had the opinion of Mrs. Eva Chase, 5305 Riverdale rd., Riverdale, Md., vice chairman of the county's Republican State Central Committee.

"Prince Georges County is getting so much criticism anyhow," said Mrs. Chase, "that anything that would help the situation is worth trying. I think it's a good move in the right direction."

Said Israel Botkin, 7728 Emerson rd., West Lanham Hills, past president of the West Lanham Hills Citizens Association:

"The trouble with the county now is that everything is on an amateur, part-time basis. It's inexpensive all right but nothing gets done. This sounds like a government that can meet the problems of the county."

Some leaders expressed caution pending further study. Walter F. Mulligan, Berwyn, Md., president of the county's civic federation, said he would request a hearing before the matter came to a vote.

Railroads Cut Charges to Save Potatoes

Eastern railroads serving potato-growing areas have begun a campaign to avert Government destruction of 25 to 40 million bushels of potatoes.

Several have made voluntary slashes in freight rates, some up to 50 percent, Agriculture Department officials said last night. In some cases the reductions were made in self defense. The Bangor and Aroostook Railroad, serving northern Maine, is dependent upon potatoes for much of its income. Government plans to destroy 20 to 25 million bushels in Aroostook County could mean the loss of five to 15 million dollars worth of freight business to this small line alone.

The Bangor and Aroostook cuts range from 10 to 20 cents a 100-pound sack, reports said, depending upon the haul. Rates from Steuben County, N. Y., to Philadelphia, where the nation's biggest potato alcohol plant is, have been cut by other lines from 48 cents to around 28 cents a sack, it was said.

Freight Rates Blamed

High freight rates by rail and water, have cost northern potato growers millions of dollars of business, they complain. Once valuable markets in the South have been virtually closed to growers in Maine and New York.

Canadian growers can ship from Prince Edward Island or New Brunswick ports, by water, to New Orleans, Savannah, Charleston, or even Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore, and undersell American spuds after paying 75 cents per 100 pounds tariff.

The January 30 Dominion Crop Report showed Canadian potatoes in Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick selling for 80 cents to $1 a bag (100 pounds) on the farms, and about 40 cents above that at shipping points.

Potatoes Dyed Blue

Across the border in Maine, the same type is being bought by the Government under the price-support program at $2.15 per 100 pounds. The Government has ordered these potatoes dyed blue and destroyed, either by plowing under or thrown out.

Southern potato growers traditionally have bought Canadian-grown seed potatoes, but such imports averaged only a million to two million bushels a year before the war.

Last year imports were about 10 million bushels—unequaled except in years of crop failures. This year experts say Canadian imports may reach 20 million bushels. At the same time the Government is buying and destroying around 70 million bushels of American potatoes at a cost of 80 to 100 million dollars.

Master Zone Plan Started For Takoma

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission is preparing a master zoning plan for Takoma Park, and it may result in legal sanction of "hundreds" of present violations.

The Takoma Park plan is expected to be completed by the end of April.

Officials pointed to "hundreds" of cases where one-family dwellings have been converted to apartments in violation of present laws. Most of the conversions took place during the war years when housing was critical and enforcement was relaxed.

The "basic problem" of these violations may be solved, it was declared, through the establishment of zones in which homeowners may convert houses to apartment use provided the exteriors of the houses are not altered.

Senate Votes On Arizona Project Feb. 21

By The Associated Press

The Senate agreed yesterday to vote February 21 on the proposed multi-million dollar central Arizona reclamation project.

The action was taken by unanimous consent because of the present or prospective absence of many members during the next two weeks.

The project has been the subject of lengthy hearings during the past three years. It is vigorously opposed by California. The Senate has debated it the past two days.

The Reclamation Bureau estimates construction costs at 738 million dollars. California opponents claim the ultimate cost may reach two billion dollars.

The Senate will resume debate on the project at 11 a. m. February 21. It will vote not earlier than noon on any amendments and under yesterday's agreement must complete its vote on all amendments and the bill by 4 p. m.

Debate time will be divided between proponents of the bill led by Senator McFarland (D., Ariz.), and opponents led by Senator Downey (D., Calif.).

At the insistence of Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), the agreement provides that a motion to return the bill to committee may also be considered, if it is offered.

Virginia Rents

Rent gouging at Quantico, as depicted by Bill Brinkley's graphic story in this newspaper, has an important bearing on the bill now before the Virginia Legislature to end rent controls. Much of the off-post private housing available to families of Marines stationed at Quantico is disgraceful. Trailers, tiny rooms with broken windows, apartments without running water or toilets are all that many families can find. It would compound the disgrace if the already exorbitant rents for inferior accommodations were to skyrocket with the removal of controls.

The situation at Quantico, of course, is a special one. By no means are all landlords heartless; the postwar expansion of Marine Corps schools has made demand greatly in excess of supply. Undoubtedly some of the rental units, such as the $350 trailers renting for $55 a month, are not now covered by rent controls. It is questionable whether private enterprise, unaided, can do much to provide more housing, for Marine enlisted men can afford only moderate rents. The best solution seems to be application of the Wherry Act, which permits the Government to lease land to private bidders for low-cost military housing insured by FHA. A contract for Wherry Act housing has just been signed at Fort Belvoir, and doubtless this procedure will help at other military installations where private housing is substandard. New housing under the Wherry Act will take time, however, and the interim period at Quantico is critical.

Whenever rent controls are ended—as they must be soon if they are not to become a permanent drag on the economy—there is bound to be some dislocation. Cities in Texas, for example, experienced rent average increases of as much as 40 percent when controls were lifted. Whether the same forces would apply in the tight Virginia rental areas—Quantico, Norfolk-Newport News and Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax—is hard to determine in light of the tremendous amount of building. It is significant, however, that the Alexandria-Arlington Rent Advisory Board fears real hardship if controls were suddenly removed.

In any event the situation at Quantico is a strong argument, it seems to us, for selective decontrol instead of the blanket removal provided in the Boatright bill now being debated at Richmond. The sensible thing would be to follow the suggestion of Delegate Armistead Boothe of Alexandria and leave decision to local boards, which now have the job of adjusting rents to provide fair income for landlords. Certainly if these boards are competent to advise on fair rents, they also are better equipped than the Legislature to decide just when local conditions will permit decontrol.

District Doldrums

The District Committees of the Senate and the House have been presenting an edifying contrast. The former made its third attempt on Tuesday to hold its first meeting of this six-week-old session of Congress. It hasn't yet been able to collect a quorum. The members of the House District Committee, on the other hand, have been busy as little bees—busy contriving legislation to be called up on "calendar Wednesday" in order to obstruct any possibility of action on the barricaded FEPC bill. The House is going to make laws for the people of Washington whether we want them or not. The Senate is going to pretend that we simply don't exist.

The inactivity of the Senate Committee is even more distressing from the District's point of view than the spurious activity of the House group. For the Senate Committee, and particularly its chairman, Senator Neely, has been extremely sympathetic and helpful to the people of Washington. It pushed the home-rule bill through the upper chamber—no doubt in part for the very good reason that it wanted to be rid of its tiresome and time-consuming obligations to this voteless community. Having done so, its members are understandably lethargic about committee meetings. And Senator Neely, a stickler for punctuality, refuses to wait for late arrivals. If he would only show them some of the same generosity he has extended to the disfranchised District, perhaps the committee could get together long enough to act on some of the urgent local measures before it.

The House Committee's use of the District as a political monkey wrench is something that only the House itself can now amend. It can do this very readily by adopting home-rule legislation and thus freeing itself for the national legislation which is its essential business.

Acheson's Homily

The sum of Secretary Acheson's remarks at his press conference yesterday was a dash of cold water on those members of Congress who think a new approach to Soviet Russia is required by the advent of the H-bomb. It would be worse than futile. Alas, we believe he is right, though a decent respect for the feelings of the free world would seem to demand that this should be spelled out by a presidential committee. The sad thing to report is that all good faith has gone out of Russo-Western relations. Broken promises by the Russians litter the history of postwar diplomacy. In these circumstances a Russian signature would not be acceptable without guarantees which the Russians would choose to call infringements on their sovereignty. Guarantees are made necessary by the physical oneness of the planet as well as by postwar experience with Moscow. A hermit life at home and an imperialism abroad make an intolerable combination to live with. But, just as we don't trust the Russians, so they don't trust us. They believe, with a religious faith, that the capitalistic structure is doomed to fall apart, with war thrust upon it by the very nature of its deficiencies.

It is therefore true enough to say, as Secretary Acheson said, that the H-bomb does not change the facts of the Russo-Western relation. Nor does it change, as he adds, the requirements of American policy to create such strength in the world as will "extend the area of possible agreement." What we ourselves had in mind when we talked of the need of a council of the country's leading men had a different connotation from the one of simply framing a new approach to the Russians. It had to do with the very task of reexamination that Mr. Acheson commends as a discipline. In this case, reexamination would have an object. Every decision to embark on new military equipment and to extend military strength calls for equal effort and the exploration of fresh fields of effort to develop spiritual and political economic strength. Senator McMahon has given one illustration. He contrasted the huge expenditures for war with the tiny expenditures on "the whisper of America." Another contrast lies in the policy toward the Atlantic community. America threw precedent to the winds when it led the way to the formation of an armed alliance of the Atlantic nations. Has the same boldness been applied to the political concept of an Atlantic community? The State Department even boggled over what sort of pale word could be substituted for "union" in describing American policy toward Europe. It finally came up with "integration," and with this word in his briefcase Mr. Hoffman went to Europe to plead for the economic organization of Europe. Bigger and better concepts are necessary as well as bigger and better bombs. It is vital to captivate the imagination of the free peoples of this world with aims and purposes above those concerned with their own obliteration.

In the recent volume, Public Opinion and Foreign Affairs, Mr. Lester Markel wrote, "Unless we educate public opinion at home, we shall not be impelled to do the job in foreign policy that needs to be done; unless we make ourselves understood abroad, no matter how good our intentions, we shall fail." Here is a job that still remains to be done. That job could and would get an appropriate restart from such a council as we have in mind. The support would then be forthcoming for whatever "bold new program" the Nation's wisdom recommended. Without such a dynamic, "bold new programs" have a habit of dying aborning. This was foreseen when the Marshall Plan was launched; the Harriman Committee served both an advisory and an educational purpose. This is not to say that Secretary Acheson's homily failed to do a service for public opinion. It did. Mr. Acheson can put a situation in perspective, and he can do it superbly. But the net effect of his suave discourse yesterday was unwittingly to put a damper on the redoubled drive that is now required in other than military activities.

Eyes On Indo-China

Never in the history of diplomacy can there have been such a gratuitous slap in the face as the Soviet Union administered to France in recognizing Ho Chi-minh and his rebel regime as the government of "The Republic of Viet Nam." Ho Chi-minh is a rebel against the constituted authority of a member of the French Union. Russian action, which was accompanied by similar action on the part of China, is thus an act of aggression against France, as well as the legal government of the State of Viet Nam. It marks a departure from the hands-off attitude that the Russians displayed during the civil war in China.

Russo-Chinese recognition of Ho came during the transition of French Indo-China from a colonial status to virtually independent membership of the French Union under Bao Dai. Bao Dai was formerly Emperor of Annam. Administrative and political powers have been surrendered to him as head of the State of Viet Nam, and Viet Nam is joined in a federation to the adjoining states of Laos and Cambodia, which also are given membership in the French Union. In defense and to some extent in foreign affairs these regimes, by agreement, will still lean on France, but otherwise their authority at home is complete. As independent states they have just been recognized by the Western powers. The question remains whether the recognitionists will now back their respective choices with arms and economic aid to the extent of turning Indo-China into a battleground for a miniature world war.

It is our fervent hope that the Western powers will wait to see what intervention, if any, is undertaken by Ho's supporters. In this context the chief danger will come from the Chinese Communists. What relation exists between Ho Chi-minh and Mao Tze-tung is a mystery. The Indochinese hate the Chinese and Ho Chi-minh must fear encroachment; but in case of any Western military intervention in behalf of Bao Dai, Ho Chi-minh would be tempted to back into the Chinese Communists. He might have no option. It seems clear that the Soviet Union is trying with might and main to persuade Mao Tze-tung to intervene in Indo-China. This may be the test of the Sino-Russian relation. The Chinese Communist schedule for the current year is said to be limited to the territories that China considers Chinese: Tibet, Hainan, Formosa. If this is correct, they would take a hand in Indo-China only under Muscovite pressure.

North Carolina's Gain

The University of North Carolina will gain a public servant of truly exceptional ability and stature in its new president, Gordon Gray. Mr. Gray has progressed through the Army ranks from private and captain to Assistant Secretary, Undersecretary and finally Secretary. He has profited from the experience. In actuality he has been the first civilian executive since Henry L. Stimson who has really run the Army. His firmness, however, has been accompanied by an almost inexhaustible patience and a North Carolina charm that have won him the stanch admiration not only of the other services but also of the generals.

It was he who engineered the unanimous Gray Board report on the National Guard, a project that took both persuasion and courage, and it is by no means to Mr. Gray's discredit that political pressures resulted in the shelving of the report. As Assistant Secretary he did valiant work in helping to place the procurement work of the Munitions Board on a sound basis. As Secretary he has approached the ticklish problem of race relations in the Army with both principle and realism, a realism he has carried over in his advocacy of the continued need for the foot soldier as against the slick claims of the pushbutton and aerial blitz addicts. In short, he has been an Army Secretary of extraordinary merit who will be extremely difficult to replace. The one consolation is the knowledge that he will be in a position to continue his public service in his home State.

Defense By Confusion

How good American defense is depends, it seems, on what spokesman you're listening to. Only a day or so after Air Force Secretary Symington gloomily described the Russian armed forces as the largest in the world, Defense Secretary Johnson cheerily asserted that the United States will soon be ready to "lick hell" out of Joe Stalin if he starts anything.

Said Secretary Symington: The Russian army, air force and submarine fleet are greater than our own and are increasing. Behind the iron curtain is "equipment capable of delivering a surprise atomic attack on any part of the United States. We have no sure defense against such an attack . . . Further reduction in our payment for national security is unthinkable."

Said Secretary Johnson: "The defense of the United States tonight is in better shape and stronger than at any time since the point system wrecked it in 1945 . . . Joe Stalin will know that if he starts something at 4 a. m., the fighting power of the United States will be on the job at 5 a. m." Despite an anticipated reduction of 100,000 men by 1951, "there will be more men in combat units ready to fight than before the reduction . . ."

Without indorsing the doctrine of strategic bombing which is Mr. Symington's main stock in trade, we suspect that he is a good deal more nearly right than Mr. Johnson is. The truth probably lies somewhere between Mr. Symington and Mr. Johnson. The question is: Where? It is, of course, possible that the defense heads are trying a new tactic of smothering the Russians with confusion. It is a good bet, however, that at this point the Kremlin knows considerably more about the true state of America's defenses than do the American people.

Prince Charming

Dr. Margaret Mead says that women are still looking for fiances superior to themselves—and wives still want their husbands to be that way. Calling this an "archaic belief," she warns that if women continue to cling to it they will develop "a group of men who get awfully nervous if their wives are any good." Dr. Mead, who spoke at a series of lectures on "Modern Woman's Dilemma—What Direction?" sponsored in New York by the New School Associates, gave her hearers the assurance, once widely voiced by old wives, that any woman can marry if she's "not too particular." Men, the anthropologist said, were more willing than women to marry whomever they could get.

However, some marital relations experts say that bachelorhood is on the increase, with 10 percent of American men preferring it. And census reports show that girls aren't nearly as particular as they used to be. In 1940 about half the young women between 20 and 24 were single, today less than one third are. Apparently Prince Charming is either losing ground, or more men are assuming his disguise—with, as divorce records indicate, the unmasking coming after marriage.

Defense Information

Your February 3 editorial "Mobilizing the Nation's Wisdom" makes a number of excellent points. In the same edition of your paper there was impressive documentation of your statement that we do not have enough information about the defenses of this country to make wise decisions as citizens. On that day an article quoted Secretary Johnson as saying that the United States is prepared to "lick the hell out of Joe Stalin" if he starts something. Yet only the day before Mr. Symington had said that the Soviet Union now has the strongest (or at least largest) army, air force and undersea navy in the world. In the absence of more information, it appears to the layman that they cannot both be right.

For example, I should have liked for Mr. Johnson to explain why he is sure that if Stalin starts something at 4 a. m. the United States will be ready to fight back at 5 a. m. As far as any of us knows, Washington is wide open to surprise attack, whether by guided missile from an offshore submarine or by enemy aircraft. As far as we know, there are no concrete plans to move essential parts of the national military headquarters or the civilian government to safer places. Therefore, it would seem foolhardy to assume that if "starting something" should mean the correct placement of one atom bomb in Washington the United States would be able to fight back at all. If the military high command, the President, the State Department and our intelligence services are wiped out, who will direct any counterattack?

We would like to know either that adequate defenses for Washington are in operation, or that a sensible decentralization will take place very soon. Or if not, why not. ANNE SCOTT.

Paying for Airports

As a taxpayer and a railroad employe I am concerned and angered at the proposal to build another large airport near Washington at Government expense. I do not oppose an airport, but I object to its being built with money provided by the taxpayers.

In all the discussion on the proposal, I have failed to note any suggestion that the airlines be asked to share in the expense of the project.

It is disturbing also to note a suggestion that the bill authorizing the new airport be worded in such a manner so as not to preclude building of a third airport if the second one proves unable to handle the contemplated travel. Since the first terminal (National Airport) cost the taxpayers between 10 and 18 million dollars, and the second one will cost additional millions, it is fair to ask just when we are going to stop being a fairy godfather to the airlines.

Hatch Act Amendment

Virginia nonpartisans found a package in their mailboxes recently. The return address was that of Senator Byrd and Congressman Smith.

The package was plainly marked "Amendment to the Hatch Act," but it ticked!

Cautious nonpartisans got out their hard-to-get copies of the secret "party plan" of the Democrats in Virginia and read:

"I . . . do state upon my honor that I am a member of the Democratic Party; that I supported all of the nominees of that party at the last preceding general election, in which I participated and in which the Democratic nominee or nominees had opposition; and I hereby promise on my honor to support all of the nominees of such party at the next ensuing general election . . ."

Then they turned to the State Democratic Party primary plan to find out who could vote:

"All white persons who are qualified to vote at the next ensuing general election; who believe in the principles of the Democratic Party; who voted for all of the nominees of that party . . . and who will support all of the nominees of that party . . . are hereby members of the Democratic Party of Virginia."

So they said, "Let's not open this package. Or at least, let's take it to the floor of some proper congressional committee and there open it to see what it has in it for us."

H-Bomb Morality

The President has announced that we will develop the hydrogen bomb, and there is hardly a voice of dissent. This indicates that the American people understand that they have no right to indulge in the luxury of expressing their subconscious moral revulsion, and that they are not going to delude themselves about that right.

They do not have the luxury because no statesmen of sufficient stature and responsibility have faced the fundamental issue and presented it officially for consideration.

The issue, it seems to me, may be briefly stated by posing alongside each other the matter of the H-bomb and the recent mercy killing by the New England doctor. The doctor has been arrested and indicted under existing statute. There is clear jurisdiction of a court, even prescribed sentence. In the matter of making and using the H-bomb, there is no body of law, no court with jurisdiction, no means of enforcing sentence.

A society so constituted that it cannot govern itself in a matter of such grave moral and political concern is, I submit, in deadly danger of self-destruction. The Congress is coming to recognition of this central issue in its consideration of H. R. 64 and S. R. 56, the world federation resolution which seeks to transform the United Nations into an instrument capable of enacting, interpreting and enforcing world law.

Attitudes In Communist China

I have just been listening to the news and editorial roundup broadcast to the Far East over the Voice of America. I would like to inform a well-known and influential American newspaper of a few truths about the Chinese situation that the American "China experts" always overlook.

I am an American but I have lived in Tientsin for 15 years; not in a tight little foreign community, but in the bosom of an ordinary Chinese family, neither rich nor official. I am not a Communist and have never in my life, until last January, had anything to do with Communists or communism. I have yet to see a Russian Communist in the flesh.

When I hear over the Voice of America the righteous indignation expressed in newspaper editorials, and by members of Congress and the Senate, at the hostile attitude of the Chinese Communists toward the U. S., it seems to me that these indignant people expect a more Christian-like "forgive your enemy" attitude than is ever displayed by any Christian nation. For four years the United States Government gave military, financial, economic and moral support to the man and group of men who have vowed that the extermination of the Chinese Communists was their chief aim in life. "Extermination" was the word used by a top-ranking Nationalist general when he repeated to me a speech Chiang Kai-shek made to his staff while poor General Marshall was in China trying to help bring about a coalition government and strengthen the Nationalists and Chiang at the same time.

A person who supplies my enemy with the wherewithal to bring about my extermination, I think I could with good reason look upon, as one who harbors no good intention toward me. Also the United States continues to tell the world through the press and over the Voice of America that the American Government intends to do all in its power to obstruct and hinder the progress of the new government in China. This past and present animosity shown by the United States begets animosity in the Chinese Communists. To openly desire one's downfall and destruction would not be the way to win that one's friendship or cause him to become a Tito.

It is a little unreasonable for the United States Government to become righteously indignant over a few unfriendly acts that didn't kill a single American, when quite a number of Chinese Communists have been killed by men trained by American Army officers for that express purpose, using guns and ammunition given by America for that express purpose.

However, the American protege got whipped in spite of all the propping up, billion-dollar shots and ringside coaching. The Chinese Communists were supported by the Chinese people, the "lau pai hsing" (ordinary citizen) that the U. S. now pins its hopes on. But the former tremendous good will of the "ordinary Chinese" toward America is a thing of the past—and I hope, of sometime in the future when the Americans get wise enough to realize that they're dealing with Chinese, not Russians or Russian puppets. At present American stock is low indeed among the "lau pai hsing" of China.

As inconceivable as it may be to the people used to the "American way of life," the ordinary Chinese who have never known anything but the "Chinese way of life" are very pleased with their new government. It is more democratic than anything they have ever known, is honest, sincere, hard working and simple living and the people are proud to have a part in it. Believe it or not! I am expressing the opinion of the ordinary Chinese I live among, the teachers, businessmen, doctors, engineers, clerks and housewives.

One last thing—the Chinese are fundamentally antiforeign and possess more "resistibility" to foreign domination than any people on earth! The Japanese didn't even make a dent in them, so don't worry about any other country doing much dominating.

Cook's Tours In Reverse

By Malvina Lindsay

American Showcase

THE AUSTRIAN journalist, on tour of this country with a group of her colleagues, had met on the boat coming over an American Army officer who told her he would never, never marry an American girl. All that American women did, he said, was to run to cocktail parties.

This puzzled the Austrian visitor, who had tried to leave behind her the frivolous, stereotyped concepts of Americans so prevalent in Europe. How could this be, she asked me, when she saw those hordes of women in New York and Washington pouring out of factories and Government buildings?

Without investigating whether the officer had been jilted by a cocktail fiend or merely had a passion for cliches, I suggested that a day with an average American housewife would help answer her question.

This intellectual visitor is one of many of her type coming to the United States these days to see how things tick here. A group of men members of the Japanese Diet is on tour and a group of Japanese women leaders is coming. Europe and South America send frequent delegations.

Naturally these visitors are most interested in the kind of people this country and its vaunted institutions have developed. Most of them honestly admit they can get only a photographic understanding of this in a few weeks.

YET THE FEW candid camera impressions these fleeting tourists get have a marked similarity. They coincide to a large degree with those of visitors who come for longer stays as members of commissions or embassy staffs. The sum of these judgments, for all its surface quality, gives a revealing view of our weakness and our strength.

The sense of rush, struggle, competition in this country at first almost overpowers Asiatics, South Americans, even Europeans. "No time to live here," is their frequent complaint. The Austrian appraiser did not mind the rush so much ("We have never been leisurely in Vienna" she said), but she felt here a frittering away of time with materialistic concerns of life.

An analytical Dutch visitor here two years felt that the great American marathon "to be popular" made adjustment to life in the United States more difficult for a foreigner than in any other country.

A Scandinavian visitor asked me in effect if the American woman's craze over fashion was really a craze over men. A short time visitor to this country always has trouble understanding how industrial and business forces, including mass production of clothing, affect the appearance, activities and interests of men and women.

A foreign visitor who had numerous speaking engagements here was amazed at the friendliness and responsiveness of American audiences—in contrast with the initial coldness of European ones—and was inclined to believe it superficial or insincere. Many visitors, especially British ones, mention the spoiled, self-assertive children. Yet the Austrian journalist, in speaking of this, quickly added that she had been impressed with the good behavior of American teen-agers, "so apparently your system works out all right."

IF WE TRY to see ourselves through the mental snapshots of these Cook's tourists in reverse we are likely to get on the debit side a sense of a breathless populace in a mad scramble after toy balloons. We also get new realization of our great sweep of energy, but wonder whether it is being directed toward matters worthy of it.

On the credit side we get new pride in our warm friendliness, our hospitality, our generosity, our free and confident way of living. We see ourselves as youthful, adventurous, ever ready to try the new, not bound by the shackles of custom and tradition, as are older peoples. A case in point—the reluctance of many Austrian housewives to use frozen foods when these are available, instead preferring to stand in their kitchens for hours preparing dishes as their grandmothers did.

Most judgments of foreign visitors reveal how difficult it is for a stranger to get under the human surface of a nationality except by long contact. Much of the superficial and spectacular here shows up to the short-term visitor. Then, too, which and where is the true America? Often I have been asked by foreign visitors, eager to know us better, "Which city is the real United States?" It is hard to explain that every city is a bit of it.

But any fresh perspective on Americans is valuable if we are to get both the criticism and approbation we need in order to grow. And these foreign visitors, whatever their comment, usually on departing, say with deep wistfulness, "I hate to leave and I want to come back."

Lewis And Beirne

We have noted in your newspaper the reporting of many damage and law suits against John L. Lewis resulting from the coal crisis. It is also noted that the union leader Beirne, in directing his followers to jam the telephone lines, is lining himself up for the same reward. After the first few homes burn, and lives are lost, the figures will begin to point in his direction.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. T. Thinks It Through

OUR RESPECTED friend Mr. T., having heard that a fair number of his neighbors would like not only to make the bomb but to think about it also, is not at all sure that it would be a good thing to do.

Lippmann

These would-be thinkers, says Mr. T., do not know what he knows and so he will tell them. They do not know the hitherto unknown news that the Soviet government is a totalitarian regime which has broken many of its promises and would quietly violate any new promises if it were profitable to do so.

With this majestic contribution to the enlightenment of his innocent and unwary neighbors, Mr. T. opines that any more thinking might lead to "horrible" results.

AMONG the would-be thinkers there are, however, many who were not born yesterday. There are many who have known quite as long as Mr. T., some of them considerably longer than has Mr. T., that the Soviet government is a totalitarian regime which does not keep its promises if it finds it useful and possible to break them. They feel, however, these would-be thinkers, that American thought on the tremendous subject of a war of extermination should begin where Mr. T's thoughts on this subject have ended.

There are several compelling reasons why the would-be thinkers believe that American thinking should not come to a dead end with the fact that the Soviet government is etc., etc., etc. A principal reason is that the United States as the first to make an atomic bomb, the first to use an atomic bomb, the first to declare that it will make the hydrogen bomb, has a peculiar and unavoidable and most solemn moral obligation to mankind. There is no way the American people can divest themselves of the duty to search for a decent and an honorable, alternative to a war of extermination. They cannot sit down, fold their hands across their stomachs, saying that their search has ended, that they have reached the limits of their wisdom, and that there is nothing more they can do except to make more and bigger bombs.

THE DAY we did that would mark the death of the American spirit. Though our cities escaped destruction and our bodies remained alive, we should have renounced our hopes, resigned our role, surrendered in the battle. Whether we won or lost the race of armaments, we should have lost the struggle for men's souls, and the right to their trust and their faith, and we should have lost our own self-respect.

To such depths of inertia and spiritual decay and intellectual defeatism we have not sunk, and no one can push us into those depths, while we are alive and kicking. This Nation has a destiny which is not yet fulfilled. Our people will not shrink from the labor of thought and the searching of their own souls which their awful responsibility demands.

MR. T. may feel that he has completed his labors and has searched his soul when he tells the millions upon millions of would-be thinkers that the Soviet government breaks its promises and so there is nothing further to be done about it all. But there are others who will feel that still they must and they mean to persevere in the search, and that if they fail, they want at least to be sure that they were not too lazy, too frightened, and too opinionated to try.

For even if there is no way by which the Russians can be induced or compelled to act in good faith, there still remains the necessity of keeping faith with ourselves. We do not keep faith with ourselves, or with the multitudes on all the continents who look to us for hope, when we refuse to admit that there is nothing which can possibly be discovered which we do not already know.

Dixie Club Asks Court to Order Action on License

The Dixie Supper Club, 3528 14th st. nw., nonsegregated restaurant, yesterday asked the District Court to force the District Commissioners and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to act on the Club's application for liquor license renewal.

The suit stated that the ABC Board last January 31 announced it was unable to agree upon a decision and that since then the club had suffered "irreparable" monetary loss through inability to sell liquor.

The suit, filed by Attorney Raymond Godbersen, asserted that protests against renewing the club's license were "part of a plan" of the Cavalier Corp., lessors of the club's premises to "force" the club owners to forfeit the lease.

The suit asked the court to order the ABC Board to arrive at a decision.

Republican Program

By Marquis Childs

What Price Generalizations?

THE REPUBLICANS are understandably pleased over the success of their box-supper rally. Even those pessimists in the party who expect little good from the top management noted the enthusiasm and especially the presence of so many young people at the crowded meeting.

Childs

One Republican cynically noted, "If you give away the tickets and offer a chicken supper and Fred Waring, naturally you're going to have a lot of people and they're going to have a good time." Large blocks of tickets were distributed among secretarial staffs on Capitol Hill. But stage-managing has a part in politics as well as show business and the end result was a rousing performance.

How far the rally may have advanced the party toward victory this fall it would be hard to say. The statement of policy was no more and no less than what had been expected—a collection of noble generalizations with a few barbs thrown in for good measure.

The fact is that there is only one national office to which the individual is elected by the people at large on a national platform, and that is the Presidency. Each member of Senate and House must run on his own voting record and as a representative of his State or district on his own platform. That makes the policy statement somewhat superfluous as a prelude to a congressional election.

THE DIVISIONS within the party were nowhere better illustrated than in the timid agricultural plank. The vagueness is the more striking when put alongside headlines describing the struggle to dispose of surplus farm products held off the market in order to sustain prices. The plank calls for:

"A program to provide a fair price for the farmers' products in the market place aided by a system of price supports and by protection against the dumping of competitive commodities produced by underpaid foreign labor, to the end that the farmer's standard of living will be in line with the contribution he makes to the national economy."

So far as the average farmer goes, this is equivalent to a ringing declaration against sin and the common cold. It represents a compromise calculated to cause the least offense to the two poles of farm opinion. On the one hand are powerful Midwestern Republicans closely allied with major farm organizations who want high, fixed price supports. On the other side of the argument is Senator George Aiken of Vermont and those who think like him. Aiken favors a more comprehensive system with flexible supports. He is convinced that high, fixed supports have worked to diminish the farmer's market.

Aiken was determined to get included in the farm plank a declaration for farmer cooperatives. He argued insistently that buying co-ops and insurance co-ops were helping the farmer to hold down his costs in the face of a steady rise in the prices of the things the farmer must buy. And this rise, as Aiken pointed out, coincides with a decline in the price of many of the products he offers for sale.

THE IDEA of indorsing cooperatives in the face of a drive from certain business interests, focused in the National Tax Equality Association, to put new taxes on co-ops frightened the policy committee. What finally came out in the plank was an indorsement of "sound cooperative marketing." The marketing co-ops are not under the same kind attack from business.

Aiken also fought for indorsement of the rural electrification program. Here, too, there was opposition. After two close votes, the committee came out for "completion of the rural electrification program."

When the Senate Republicans met to consider the statement, there were a number of absentees. On a voice vote, seven or eight Senators voted no. Some took satisfaction from what had been eliminated in early exchanges between standpatters and those who believe the GOP must look forward with a positive program. Support for Illinois' National Committeeman Werner Schroeder's denunciation of the bipartisan foreign policy was almost nil.

Once again Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts showed his capacities for leadership. Appointed to the Senate subcommittee to draft the statement, Lodge never pulled his punches. Flanked by Senator Owen Brewster of Maine and Senator Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska, he stood up for the views of the Senate faction that has become increasingly determined and articulate.

Both major parties have the unity of a circus tent in that they cover a variety of performance and opinion. One thing this latest GOP effort showed is that the center ring, where the Old Guard has held forth so long, now has determined competition.

Oil Men Assail Truman's Plan To Cut Their Tax Exemption

By The Associated Press

Oil industry spokesmen protested bitterly yesterday against President Truman's proposal to cut down on their special tax exemptions.

They told the House Ways and Means Committee it would endanger national defense and have a bad effect on the Nation's economic growth.

The committee is considering Mr. Truman's new tax recommendations, including a proposal to cut the oil industry's "depletion allowance" from 27½ percent to 15 percent.

Several industry spokesmen registered their opposition yesterday.

"We need an active, virile, prosperous oil industry for our national defense," said Ernest Thomason, a member of the Texas Railroad Commission.

He said "oil is ammunition" and that removal of tax concessions also would "stop the advancing economy of the Nation," because many industries and up to 10 million persons are directly dependent upon the oil industry.

Russell B. Brown, cochairman of the Petroleum Industry's General Depletion Committee, said the tax alowance is "inadequate, rather than excessive."

"The oil industry faces a tremendous, difficult and costly task in providing an assured supply of oil to meet whatever needs may arise," he said.

Mr. Lewis On "Free Men"

In his letter to President Truman, John L. Lewis said that the mine workers are "free citizens in a free country" and that they have an "inherent right" to pass upon the considerations under which they will work. The experience of Joseph Dickmon shows just how "free" the miners really are, just how destitute they are of the most elementary rights of free citizens in a free country.

Mr. Dickmon, a young Navy veteran, married and father of a child, wanted to work five days a week instead of the three decreed by Mr. Lewis. He said that Mr. Lewis was a dictator, and that the miners should ignore his three-day week. He wrote to Pittsburgh newspapers, pointing out that Mr. Lewis is not "starving."

For this he was haled before a meeting of his local branch of the United Mine Workers, and charged with violating a section of the Mine Workers' constitution which forbids "false statements" about union leaders. Mr. Dickmon's statement in his letter was not false. John L. Lewis does draw a salary from the mine workers of $50,000 a year. He definitely is not starving. Was it false to say that Mr. Lewis is a dictator? Mr. Dickmon's local evidently thought so, for he was adjudged guilty and suspended for six months, which means that he cannot work at his trade during that time.

Other people may differ with that judgment. It is perfectly clear that no individual miner can openly oppose Mr. Lewis without penalty. Most of them probably have no desire to oppose him. But for any who may wish to do so, the experience of Joseph Dickmon stands as lesson and warning. Within the union, the power of John L. Lewis is absolute. And he uses that power, not only to crush opposition within his union, but in an attempt to impose his will on the people of the United States.

It is in this power enjoyed by union bosses, not in the Taft-Hartley Act, that one finds real enslavement of the American worker. Under the Taft-Hartley Act, if the mine workers were compelled to obey it, Joseph Dickmon could not be expelled for opposing Mr. Lewis. That is one reason why Mr. Lewis does not like the law. And it may be hoped that the President of the United States will remember the case of Joseph Dickmon when he again considers lending the prestige of his office to the attack by the union bosses on what they like to call the Taft-Hartley "slave labor" law.

VA, AEC Facing Cuts In Emergency Funds

By The Associated Press

A 10 percent cut in emergency funds for the Atomic Energy Commission and the Veterans' Administration was recommended yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

But in approving an omnibus $732,485,500 money bill for House action later this week, the committee said the cuts would not interfere with the operations of either of the two big agencies. None of the AEC funds was earmarked for work on the hydrogen bomb, committee members said.

The money is for use during the remaining months of the 1950 fiscal year ending June 30. The regular 1951 budgets of the agencies receiving the emergency financing are to be included in an over-all appropriation bill now being prepared by the committee.

The Atomic Energy Commission asked for $87,650,000 in new contract authority. The committee recommended $78,885,000. The Veterans Administration wanted 800 million dollars and was allotted 720 million dolalrs.

The $12,365,000 sought by the Tennessee Valley Authority was trimmed to $11,682,500.

Committee members said privately the pattern of cutting all money requests by 10 percent may be followed on all appropriations for the coming fiscal year, except in isolated cases.

D. C. Court Holds Loan Rule Invalid

District Court Judge Henry W. Schweinhaut yesterday declared invalid, as "unauthorized legislation," District regulation of loan companies charging interest rates of 6 percent or less.

The chief purpose of the regulation, which the Commissioners adopted last September, was to prevent loan companies from forcing a borrower to buy an excessive amount of insurance as a prerequisite to obtaining a loan.

Chester H. Gray, principal assistant corporation counsel, who drafted the regulation, said it has not been decided whether the District will appeal.

Just how many companies will be affected by the ruling was not clear. William R. Lichtenberg, attorney for the Columbia Credit Co. whose suit for an injunction brought the ruling, said about 25 companies charge 6 percent or less.

Schweinhaut observed that Congress in 1913 gave the Commissioners authority to regulate money lenders charging more than 6 percent interest rates.

"It would seem clear," he said, "that the Congress saw no need for supervision of money-lending rates not in excess of 6 percent . . . The Congress having acted with respect to the problem, I think the Commissioners may not do so unless they have express authority."

and educational publications circulated for classroom use.

Post Office Chairman Tom Murray (D., Tenn.) in a surprise move obtained acceptance of an important recommendation of the Hoover commission, empowering the Postmaster General to set his own rates on special services, such as special delivery, postal notes, registered mail, insured mail and c. o. d. matter.

Rates Also Are Boosted

Pending action by the Postmaster General, the bill raised rates on special services to yield increases of $5,800,000 on special delivery services, $1,450,000 on postal notes, $4,065,000 on registered mail, $550,000 on insured mail, $1,900,000 on c. o. d. mail, $400,000 on certificates of mailing and $600,000 on notices of change of address.

In the third class mailing field (largely circulars, catalogues, books and merchandise), another $23,600,000 would be raised.

The bill was called up under "Calendar Wednesday" procedure, providing for a weekly call of committees having legislation to report. It is under this procedure that civil rights advocates hope to call up the FEPC bill on February 22. The House District Committee, which will claim the February 15 call, is the only House group now having "Calendar Wednesday" priority over the House Labor Committee and the FEPC bill.

D. C. Woman Loses Suit Over Fall On Icy Sidewalk

Mrs. Laura Friedman, of 1427 Meridian pl. nw., yesterday lost her $15,000 damage suit in District Court for injuries she suffered in a fall on an icy sidewalk on February 4, 1948, in front of 1362 Ft. Stevens dr. nw.

Mrs. Friedman sued the District of Columbia government, charging that the street was unsafe. Judge James R. Kirkland dismissed the case on motion of Oliver Gasch and John F. Doyle, assistant corporation counsels. The judge said that since there had been a heavy snowfall, the District had a duty first to clean arterial streets in the center of the city. It was argued that the location of the accident was 7 miles from the zero milestone.

overflow of commercial air traffic from National.

For comparison, the committee was told that installations at Washington National Airport will have cost about $25,500,000 when existing appropriations are spent.

The committee was advised the present National Airport has reached the air traffic saturation point, and that by 1955 the Washington metropolitan area will require commercial airport capacity close to 50 percent greater than now.

The committee considered, but did not approve a request by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors to write into the bill a guarantee that public hearings would be held on any site before it finally is chosen for the new airport.

Chrysler's offer to its employees is reasonable and sound

HAVE you read the proposals made by Chrysler Corporation in response to a Union demand for pensions and increased insurance benefits?

This is, in every sense, a substantial offer. Its real benefits to employees compare well with pension plans in this and other industries.

Chrysler employees with 25 years of credited service at age 65 would, upon retirement, receive pensions of $100 a month for life. At the same time increased life insurance at lower cost, new free life insurance for employees after they retire, and improved sickness benefits are offered.

The company made these proposals in good faith. Throughout the negotiations it made clear its willingness to discuss in detail the specific elements of eligibility and other questions, in order to reach fair and equitable arrangements.

"Cents per hour" don't pay pensions. Nobody can tell what pension costs will be over any given period. The real question is, will the retired employee collect each month for life? The strongest assurance of pension payments is Chrysler's guarantee, backed by the full credit and resources of the company.

For 25 years Chrysler has never missed a payroll. Its obligation to meet pension payments for life would be just as binding as that of paying current wages.

This is a reasonable proposal. We believe Chrysler employees who compare it with other industrial pensions will agree to its soundness.

Chrysler Corporation.

"cents per hour" don't pay pensions

If the union wants pensions, Chrysler's offer is a good way to get them

We reproduce these 4 pages, covering fields other surveys overlooked, as an example of the unique service we give. It will rise in value every month, now that Resolutions aiming at Atlantic Union of the Free are before Congress for action.

On Second Thought

50 Years' Progress in Liberty and Union

WE ARE HALF WAY through the 20th century. It is a good time to pause and take some bearings. Where were we when this century began? Where are we now? Only by taking such bearings from time to time can we make a reasonable guess of our hopes for the future.

First, some perspective. If the full 20 centuries be divided as hours on a clock, between midnight and noon, then the first half of this century represents but 18 minutes, the period from 11:24 a.m. to 11:42 a.m.

Next, whom do we mean by "we" when we ask, where were we when this century began at 11:24? Where are we now, at 11:42? By "we" I mean all those who believe (a) in the principles of individual freedom which were made the basis of government for the first time in the Declaration of Independence in 1776 (at 10:33 a.m. by our clock), and (b) in the basic principles of federal union of the free which were first established five minutes later (at 10:38) in the U. S. Constitution of 1789. These are the principles to which FREEDOM & UNION is dedicated.

Looked at from this viewpoint, the progress made in both regards in the first half of this century is truly astonishing and the prospect before us is extremely encouraging.

Consider first a few of the achievements in the field of freedom since 1900. When the century began, there were on earth only 20 republics, apart from the U.S., and only two existed outside the New World—Switzerland and France. Now there are only 18 countries left, apart from the British monarchy, that maintain the principle of an hereditary ruler, and all but six of these are in Asia and Africa.

U. S. first stressed individual freedoms

In 1900 only seven or eight of the kingdoms that then ruled the great bulk of mankind had followed Britain's lead in practising the principles of constitutional monarchy. Now only four of the remaining kingdoms — Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Ethiopia, and Spain (that kingless kingdom)—fail to style themselves constitutional monarchies. And Britain itself has advanced the principles of democratic monarchy to a point that would have shocked Queen Victoria.

No nation that began the century as a republic has reverted to monarchy. No constitutional monarchy of 1900 has backslid into autocracy. Meanwhile, gone are all the great hereditary autocracies that seemed so powerfully entrenched in 1900. Republics replace the Hohenzollern, Hapsburg, Romanoff, Ottoman, and Chinese thrones. The only one of these dynasties that remains with a crown—the Japanese—is hedged in now by democratic institutions. The British Empire in Southern Asia is practically gone; India is governed as a republic.

Lip Service of Kremlin

True, some of the thrones that have been swept away were replaced by even more totalitarian dictatorships, but only one of these—the Communist—remains. True too, the Commissars have outdone the Czar of 1900 in atrocious tyranny, just as Hitler outdid the Kaiser.

But it is important to note that Stalin bases his rule, as Hitler did, on the principle of popular consent. Although he, too, never lets that principle be freely applied, he does pay lip service to the theory that power proceeds from the people. Such an autocracy can never gain the roots that grew from the previous principle that power proceeded not from the people but by divine right and was handed down from father to son. The Czar was never in conflict with the principle on which his own rule was based, but Stalin's practice is forever mocking his principle of popular consent, and his dictatorship is therefore much more vulnerable from this standpoint.

Moreover, the Communist dictatorship has had only one generation in which to root itself in office, whereas the Czar had centuries. When Stalin dies, the succession cannot be as sure and stable as was the Czar's. The Communist dictatorship is the more exposed to overthrow since its principles and its history alike glorify conspiracy and revolution.

Communism mars record of advancing liberty

None of the few countries which, in 1900, safeguarded their citizens with a Bill of Rights have ended or even lessened these rights; new rights, instead, have been added. Many other countries have followed their example, at least to the point of paying lip service to the principle of liberty and equality by adopting a paper Bill of Rights. Indeed, the United Nations has succeeded in getting down, on paper at least, a world declaration of human rights—a feat the League of Nations did not even dare attempt.

Only a tiny fraction of the women of the world in 1900 had the right to vote. They were scattered through a few states in the U.S., and it took a bitter battle to persuade the others in the first quarter of this century to make woman suffrage nation-wide. Now the nations where women do not have the vote are the exception, and the most fantastic of these exceptions is the Swiss democracy.

Certainly one of the major achievements of the 20th century has been the emancipation of half the human race—and the vote is only one of many evidences of the remarkable world-wide rise in the status of women during the past . . . 18 minutes of history. The communist dictatorships and the civil liberty democracies, the nations of Asia and the West, all have this at least in common: Discrimination based on sex is far less now then it was in 1900.

The literacy of both sexes is also much more widespread now. This basic indication of increasing freedom from the tyranny of ignorance fits in a general picture of rising levels of popular education—more students in grade school, high school, college than in 1900. The Freedom & Union's Policy is:

To educate the public, in the U. S. and abroad, in the principles of individual freedom and federal union, and their importance to peace, production, higher living standards and greater spiritual development and happiness.

To this end, to support the convocation now of a federal constitution convention representing all the experienced civil liberty democracies, with a view to their forming a Federal Union of the Free, or Atlantic Union, which would guarantee their Bill of Rights, govern them in those fields where they agree that a common government, federally proportionate to the people, and directly elected by and responsible to them, would best advance their individual freedom, and uphold the right of each nation in the Union to continue to govern all its other national affairs in complete independence.

To make sure that such a Union shall be formed as the nucleus of an eventual world republic, the first step toward a universal free federal world government, and shall meanwhile be a loyal member of the United Nations and seek to extend the Union's free federal institutions to other nations peacefully and as rapidly as practicable.

To provide a magazine forum for the presentation of all views on the whole problem of freedom and the world republic.

You can't read all you already have to read? Nor can you eat all that's on the menu, either. Why not choose—once a month in Freedom & Union—some food for thought that doesn't dull & lull the mind but quickens it?

simplification of the alphabet in Turkey, and the efforts that are being made in China to make it easier for the masses to learn to read and write are innovations of the first half of the century.

So, too, are such developments as the Rhodes Scholarships, the Fulbright fellowships, and the spending of the Boxer indemnity to enable Chinese students to attend U. S. universities, to mention but a few examples. The education and freedom from prejudice that come from thus internationalizing the background of the rising generation is beyond calculation.

True, the immense rise in literacy in such countries as Russia has been accompanied by dictatorship; the people are not free to read and write as they please. But this does not outweigh the advantage gained for freedom. Once a person can read and write, even the strictest dictatorship cannot henceforth be sure he will never read anything in freedom's great and incredibly widespread library, nor contribute anything to it in his own writing. Much of that library was written by men who risked or suffered imprisonment, torture or death at the hands of some autocrat.

Consider, too, how much the individual has been freed from the barriers of distance in the past 50 years. I recently made a 9,000-mile tour around the United States, much of it by airplane. I remember well the first paved country road I ever saw; it was in 1917, a stretch of not more than 40 miles that had been recently built between Tacoma and Seattle. And now from the air one surveys an immense network of paved roads all over the U.S., which—with the millions of automobiles on them—have spread over the country as if by magic since then.

Rapid Progress of Aviation

The automobile had begun to creep, at least, before our century began, but the airplane from which I surveyed the web of paved highways it had woven—the airplane was not off the ground in 1900. This amazing installation of great airports everywhere, huge airliners coming in and taking off daily from, and to, all parts of the country and the world, the vast factories behind them, and the many thousands of highly trained personnel that serve aviation—it does not seem possible that all this could have been developed within the lifetime of everyone who has reached 47 years of age.

In the same year, 1903, when man first freed himself from the earth and flew, he also first crossed the U.S. by automobile—and the trip from San Francisco to New York took 69 days. In that year I was seven years old, and I remember that one of the firmest convictions I then shared with the other children of Missouri was that a man could not possibly live if he went a mile a minute; such speed would kill him. And already men fly faster than 10 miles a minute, faster than sound itself.

One could go on endlessly, but these examples may suffice to set the reader himself to measuring what man has done to free mankind in other ways since 1900 by the development of medicine, industry*—the principle of mass production is an innovation of our century—engineering, chemistry, electricity, radar, atomic energy, science and other fields.

With liberty, the Declaration of Independence coupled life and the pursuit of happiness. In 1900 the total population of the world was estimated at 1,488,000,000; now it is estimated at 2,264,000,000 — despite two World Wars, a great depression  in the West and a number of famines in Asia. In the perspective of the past 50 years, life has flourished in our century—to the point, indeed, where some are sounding again the alarm that Malthus rang when the world's population was far less than now.

As for happiness, who can say whether more people are free now to pursue what is happiness to them? But, whether they use the means at hand well or no, they now have means at hand that the proudest padishahs never enjoyed before 1900. And that—like the literacy of dictatorship's slave—must be entered on the asset side of freedom's ledger.

(and Much Besides)

Union's Record

From the standpoint of union, the progress since 1900 is no less inspiring.

Those who consider union in the looser sense, as meaning any kind of international organization, can point to the fact that in this period men succeeded in establishing the first world-wide political body—the League of Nations. When it failed, they undauntedly set up another, greater league, the United Nations. They also established such world-wide functional institutions as the International Labor Organization, the World Court, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the World Health Organization, and others that mankind never had before.

In the stronger sense of federalism, union has made no less impressive strides. Such vast areas and populations as those of Australia, South Africa, India and the French empire have been reorganized since 1900 on a federal basis, and Russia has been changed into a federation, albeit not a free one.

In 1900 there was no movement for international federation of any importance anywhere. In the twenties and thirties the idea of European federation gained such leaders as Briand and Herriot, but got nowhere. But now the press is filled with world reports of many attempts at, or movements for, international federation: Benelux Union, Italo-French union, Anglo-Scandinavian union, Western European union, Anglo-American union, Atlantic Union, Federal Union of the Free. And some enthusiasts even think it already possible to turn the United Nations as a body into world government.

One third of the members of the U. S. Senate and nearly a third of the members of the House of Representatives are already pledged to vote for one or both of two federalist resolutions introduced in Congress last year. One would apply the principles of international federation among the free Atlantic democracies; the other, on a universal scale, by amendment of the United Nations Charter. Senate hearings on these resolutions are scheduled to begin this month. Only a majority in both Houses is needed to pass either resolution.

The outlook is particularly bright for the resolution that seems to us much the more practical and promising—the one calling for a Federal Convention of the seven democracies that sponsored the Atlantic Alliance to explore how far they can go in constituting now a free federal union. It has behind it already some of the most powerful leaders of both parties in both Houses.

Behind it, too, is the rapidly growing Atlantic Union Committee. Its president is a former U. S. Supreme Court Justice, Owen J. Roberts; its vice-presidents are a former Secretary of War, Robert Patterson, and a former Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, Will Clayton. Not since former President Taft headed the League to Enforce Peace has the U. S. seen a citizens action committee in the field of international organization with such influential leadership. Behind these leaders is an impressive list of distinguished citizens from all fields, and newspapers from every part of the country, with many significant additions to the list rolling in every month.

A Look to the Future

The picture is by no means all rosy, as regards either freedom or union. The difficulties and dangers remain immense. But these are so constantly emphasized by so many leaders as to develop a widespread feeling of discouragement, despair and apathy, a forlorn belief that all is going for the worst in the worst of worlds, where the individual is helpless, doomed to frustration in all his nobler undertakings. This feeling is itself, perhaps, the greatest difficulty and danger facing freedom and union today. Certainly they are not endangered by too much hope, confidence, enthusiasm.

The cure for over-optimism is to look at the problems ahead. But over-pessimism needs curing now, and the cure lies in looking backward over all that has been achieved in the past 50 years. Let those who say that federal union of the free is still a generation ahead consider the progress made in the past generation before they prophesy again.

Convoke Convention Now

Already the world of 1900 seems remote—and its remoteness gives a hint of how remote 1950 may seem to those who look back on our world from the vantage point of the year 2000. It will seem even more remote, and the stupendous achievements of the first half of the century will pale beside the unimaginable ones the second half will record, if we begin the latter by promptly convoking in 1950 an Atlantic Federal Constitutional Convention.

Think of all that has been gained in human freedom's many fields in the past 50 years—with the free enfeebled by war-inviting division into a dozen sovereign nations. Think, too, of the astounding progress made since 13 States, totalling hardly more than 3,000,000 free men, came together in 1789 in mankind's first federal union. Then one can faintly imagine the great flowering of human freedom in every field that will follow in the next 50 years if we start in 1950 to federate the 300,000,000 free men and women in the world today.

For my part I venture to predict that when, in the year 2000, men look back to 1950, they will not be impressed by the difficulties and dangers confronting union now of all the free. They will wonder that men did not recognize earlier the great evolution that had already made such union ripe. And they will be astonished that so many Americans were so slow to see the great advantages that lay in this extension of their basic principles, and waited so long to begin to federate the free.

Realtors Hit Housing Bill As 'Politics'

The National Association of Real Estate Boards yesterday attacked the Administration's "middle income" housing bill as "class legislation" and "a vote-getting political vehicle."

Appearing on behalf of the association, John C. Thompson, of Newark, N. J., told the House Banking and Currency Committee that the bill "cannot and will not deliver on the promises which are being held out to the public."

He cited testimony of Raymond M. Foley, Housing and Home Finance Agency Administrator, to show there are eight million families in the middle-income group.

"By no stretch of the imagination can this bill, even under the most favorable circumstances, provide more than 200,000 units," he said.

Thompson called attention to the fact that this is about 3 percent of the total in the middle-income group.

Senate Votes $50,000 Fund To Study RFC

By The Associated Press

The Senate yesterday authorized a $50,000 study of the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The survey will be conducted by the Senate Banking Committee.

A bill calling for the study was passed by voice vote. Neither House action nor presidential approval is required.

Before passing the bill the Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) which specifies that the Banking Committee shall conduct a study—not an investigation of the RFC program.

RFC officials are confident their recent loans of $44,400,000 to the Kaiser-Frazer Co. will be repaid, a House committee report showed yesterday.

Distributors Must Give Up Movie Houses

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Six film companies today were given three years to divorce their theaters from the distributing end of the movie business.

A Federal Court order also enjoined the distributors from trying to fix theater admission prices.

Distributors named in the order were Loew's Inc. (MGM), Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.; Warner Brothers Pictures Distributing Corp., and Twentieth Century Fox Films Corp.

Exhibitors named were Loew's, Warner Brothers Pictures, Twentieth Century and Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corp. and the National Theaters Corp.

Columbia Pictures Corp., Universal, and United Artists Corp. were directed to follow a court-ordained code of conduct, although they do not own theaters. They are distributors.

Not affected by the latest decree were RKO Corp. and Paramount Pictures.

Witnesses Split on Security Laws for Public Employes

By The Associated Press

Witnesses before the Senate Finance Committee split sharply yesterday over a proposal to bring State and local government employes into the Federal Social Security program.

The National Conference on Public Employe Retirement Systems urged making it impossible for members of State and local retirement systems to enter into the Federal Old-Age and Survivors' Insurance setup.

Robert J. Adams, jr., a Philadelphia high school teacher and spokesman for the conference, said the one million public employes he represented simply asked to be let alone. He added that they consider their present retirement benefits superior to those offered under Social Security.

But Carl H. Chatters, executive director of the American Municipal Association, argued that the Federal program should be made available to all State and local employes as a step toward universal coverage.

Under study by the Senate committee is a House-passed bill to broaden the coverage and increase the benefits of the Social Security program.

It would permit State and local employes to be brought into the Federal system under contracts made by the States with the Federal Security Agency. Employes covered by exisiting retirement systems would be included only if two thirds of the members voted to take part.

Spaatz Heads Audience

Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz, who in 1942 commanded the United States Eighth Air Force based in England, last night headed a distinguished audience at the Palace Theater for an invitational preview of "Twelve O'clock High."

The general, whose command of the Strategic Air Forces saw the experiments of daylight precision bombing, witnessed a fine, moving film dedicated to retelling this saga of Air Force history. With Gregory Peck heading an all-male cast, the wartime leader watched as drama the very story which a few years ago he struggled to bring to life.

Air Force searchlights streamed over the theater, the Air Force Band played in front of the house. The Air Force Drum and Bugle Corps and the Singing Sergeants, who've become radio favorites, entertained from the stage.

Throughout the theater, the leaves, eagles and stars of top-ranking Air Force officials dotted the audience, which further included congressional and diplomatic figures of the city.

Claims Board Awards POWs Dollar a Day

Former prisoners of war in the hands of Germany or Japan will receive $1 a day for their time in prison, the War Claims Commission ruled yesterday.

The ruling, signed by Chairman Daniel F. Cleary and Mrs. Georgia L. Lusk, held that all prison camps in both enemy countries were substandard and their food unequal in quantity and quality to provisions of the Geneva treaty of 1929. Under the War Claims Act POWs are entitled to $1 for each day they did not receive food equal to the Geneva standard.

VA Officials Face All-Day Legion Quiz

American Legion service officers at the Legion national rehabilitation conference here yesterday fired questions at Veterans Administration officials in an all-day session on claims, insurance and appeals.

Most of the queries related to specific cases of veterans the Legion is aiding in claims before regional VA offices and rating boards in various parts of the country.

Among the VA officials who answered queries were Willis Howard, assistant administrator for claims; Harold W. Breining, assistant administrator for insurance; R. L. Jarnigan, chairman of the Board of Veterans Appeals, and officials of the War Claims Commission, headed by D. F. Cleary, chairman.

Similar discussions are scheduled today on discharge and disability review boards, boards of correction, military and naval records, hospital construction and medical services. Reports also are expected from the committee on recommendations.

Hoover Group Says 'Interests' Block Reform

Organized opposition by "vested interests" is blocking consideration of important postal reforms, the Citizens Committee for the Hoover report declared yesterday.

"Vested interests," the committee reported, "appear more anxious to 'save their own skins' than they are to save the taxpayer a possible quarter of a billion dollars."

The committee, formed to press for adoption of economies recommended by the commission, of which former President Herbert Hoover was chairman, pointed out that no congressional hearings on two reorganization bills have been held since they were introduced last July. It added that the Senate Postoffice Committee has scheduled hearings for mid-February.

Opposition to accounting reforms recommended by the Hoover Commission is still apparent, the committee said. It charged this came from "a few persons on the Government payroll."

60 Ministers To See Truman Today on Tour

Sixty Illinois Methodist ministers today will complete a three-day Washington seminar on mid-century America.

During the day they expect to meet President Truman and Vice President Barkley and talk with their Congressmen and Representatives.

Bishop J. Ralph McGee of the Chicago area of the Methodist Church and Dr. Paul Douglass, president of the American University, will speak at closing dinner of the seminar at Foundry Church (Methodist), 16th and P sts. nw., tonight at 6 o'clock.

Yesterday they heard Mexican Ambassador Rafael de la Colina declare that world peace cannot be achieved "without a workable and reasonable efficient international organization."

4 Men Slated To Be Ordained Today at C. U.

Four men will be ordained to the priesthood by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, at 8 a. m. today at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

Ordination ceremonies at the shrine began Monday, when Archbishop O'Boyle administered the rite of tonsure and the minor orders of porter, reader, exorcist, and acolyte, to 33 seminarians.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington, administered the rite of subdeacon to 19 men Tuesday morning, and yesterday ordained 28 to the diaconate.

Ely Culbertson's Son Found Dead in Brook

Brattleboro, Vt., Feb. 8 (AP).—Peter Culbertson, 19-month-old son of bridge expert Ely Culbertson, died accidentally today near the home of his parents.

The child's body was found under the frozen surface of a brook. Dr. Samuel D. Bell, jr., said he believed the boy died in a fall from a bridge.

Waterloo Hands Caps 4th Loss in Row

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

YOU'D HAVE to put in with Mr. Herb Kroeten, the West Point boxing coach, who raised a righteous-sounding squawk after the official balloting gave Maryland University a one-sided victory over his Army boys at College Park the other night.

POVICH

Kroeten didn't like the setup in which the two judges and the referee were paid employes of the District Boxing Commission, lordly chairmaned by Heinie Miller. As it happens, Miller is also the Maryland boxing coach. The question which suggests itself is: How's that again?

This is no intent to impugn the good faith of the Messrs. Charlie Reynolds, Joe Bunsa and Harry Volkman who call 'em as they view 'em, but the bland innocence of Miller is downright interesting.

As chairman of the Boxing Commission, Miller had a set of officials in there who were, in a sense, his servants. To get their promotions and the choice assignments in the pro fights, they must make good with the commission chairman-Maryland boxing coach. At best, it was a situation to embarrass everybody. At worst, it was rough on Army.

ARMY IS SHYING off from future bouts with Maryland. Catholic University has already dropped Miller's team from its schedule despite the fact that its boxing coach, Eddie LaFond, is also a Miller employe as a boxing commission referee. LaFond is risking Miller's displeasure and getting away with it, probably because he's the top commission referee with too many friends in his corner.

Miller defends his position by pointing out that all of the experienced referees and judges in Washington are commission employes and that to get the best for college bouts you must select from their ranks. It has never occurred to him, apparently, that nearby Baltimore is over-run with seasoned officials who owe nothing to the D. C. Boxing Commission.

Army's post-fight protests are airily dismissed by Miller, who says "that always happens in college boxing." He was taking the bigger risk, he said, in the possibility that his own officials "might lean backward" to give Army the breaks. But the impression persists that Miller could have removed all temptation for everybody and insured strict neutrality by providing officials that were utter strangers to both coaches.

ONLY A COMPARATIVE few colleges are maintaining boxing teams these days. The value of the sport has long been questioned. Even with the headgear the varsity fighters wear and their 12-ounce gloves, it's on the brutal side, and usually devoid of the science you see in a $5-a-round preliminary fight in the pro arenas.

The collegians fight only three two-minute rounds. So short are the bouts that there is little time for much of a show of science. They pay off on slugging. It's wonderful action for the fans but too many times it appears unseemly for college kids to be belting each other around in what too often are horrible mismatches.

The pros are not nearly as guilty as the collegians on the score of mismatches. The college coaches have to match their men with their opponents, weight for weight, without regard to comparative skills, and that makes for a dismal sequence. The national college champion 145-pounder may be in there with a kid who has never won a fight, but who doesn't want to duck one. It adds up to no contest.

IN THE OLD DAYS, they used to call it the manly art of self-defense, and boxing in those days did have meaning. It was the era of footpads when a citizen had to protect himself against bodily assault, and a knowledge of fisticuffs was highly important. But since the turn of the century the thugs take the easy way of sticking a gat in your ribs, if they want your dough, and that great equalizer has reduced Jack Dempsey and Casper Milquetoast to common victims.

For the college kids who flirt with the idea of turning pro, their college fight training is of doubtful value anyway. They no longer have the protection of those cushiony headgears, and they learn that 6-ounce gloves can jar more than 12-ouncers. They wouldn't necessarily know how to protect themselves at infighting, because in college they break them too quickly.

Thus, college boxing isn't quite fitting the kids for a later profession as can their football, basketball and baseball. It's native with 'em to want to fight with fists, perhaps, but there seems to be no great call for the colleges to encourage it.

Locals Fade, 77-70, After Blowing Lead Of 9 Points

Special Dispatch to The Post

Waterloo, Iowa, Feb. 8.—Squandering a nine-point lead they held late in the third period, the fading Washington Caps lost a 77-70 decision to Waterloo here tonight, their fourth straight setback.

A crowd of 3831, including 1600 Boy Scouts, watched the NBA contest.

It was an even game until Waterloo, using only nine men, put on its winning spurt. At the period way stations it was tied at 16, 40 and 59.

Hawk Coach Jack Smiley and Don Boven notched baskets to tie the game at 61-all. The score was tied four more times before Dick Mehen's goal put the Hawks ahead, 72-70, with 1½ minutes left. The Caps failed to get another point.

Coach Bob Feerick didn't play and Bones McKinney and Jack Nichols got only 4 points each for the Caps. Their performances were 2 points short of that of Elmer Gainer, a local product who filled in for Waterloo when Regular Ward Gibson was suspended indefinitely by the club.

Freddie Scolari tried to take up the scoring slack for the visitors, tallying 16 points. Runnerup for the Caps was Chick Resier who tallied 14.

Little Leo Kubiak led Waterloo with 17 points and Boven scored 16.

Before bowing tonight, the Caps lost successive engagements to Indianapolis, New York and Sheboygan. Their record now is 23 and 26. The victory was only the 12th for Waterloo against 36 losses.

To Win Half of Games

Revitalized Sports Urged at Harvard

BOSTON, FEB. 8 (AP).—The Boston Traveler said today that Harvard's provost, Paul H. Buck, has recommended to the Harvard corporation a revitalization of the school's entire athletics program to start it back toward the heights from which it has fallen.

The Traveler said Buck, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, had submitted this six-point program, although it has not yet been made public:

1—Continuance of Harvard varsity football with traditional prospective students who possess athletic skills.

2—Offers of scholarships to students having leadership qualities.

3—Restoration of job guarantees to aid the right kind of student.

4—Openly acknowledge that Harvard has no barriers against prospective students who possess athletic skills.

5—Provide a link between the Harvard Athletic Association and the college employment office to speed the sympathetic handling of needy cases—with consideration of a student's all-around value to the college.

6—To emphasize need for revitalizing Harvard athletics, to meet Ivy competition while observing fully the legal and scholastic standards demanded by a self-respecting institution of higher learning.

Jim Gaffney, former Harvard football captain who lost a leg in World War II, and Bill Wilson, another former Crimson grid star—now Lowell High School backfield coach, were quoted as saying:

"We have been authorized to say that Harvard is not giving up football and that we will play Yale and other traditional rivals and hope to win at least half of our games."

To Avoid Conflict With Caps

Uline Trying to Lure Colleges From Armory

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Uline Arena plans to corner Washington's indoor sports next winter.

Bob Foster, general manager of the ice arena, said yesterday that he has made attractive offers to lure the George Washington-Georgetown basketball double-headers away from the National Guard Armory to Uline.

He said the arena also plans to hold high school basketball, professional boxing, roller skating and ice show performances there—to make Uline the Madison Square Garden of Washington.

"We want to end the cut-throat competition that exists now between the Washington Caps and the colleges, which play their most important games on the same nights, Saturdays," said Foster.

"We want the colleges to play double-headers at Uline on Tuesday and Friday nights, and have the Caps play here Wednesday and Saturday nights," continued Foster.

Big Time Games Planned

"It would be a more workable situation, and we can promote the Washington basketball on a big-time basis.

"G. W. and Georgetown are scheduling home games against such teams as Ohio State, Bradley, Villanova and Holy Cross next year, and we feel they can draw very well if competition is eliminated.

"Besides, with Tuesday and Friday dates to offer, the District schools have a better chance to schedule the big-time teams which are on their way to and from New York," said Foster.

"We believe we have a lot more to offer them than the Armory, most important of which is a much larger seating capacity. We can get better than 8000 into Uline for basketball, while the Armory is limited to about 5000," he said.

Jack Hagerty, Georgetown athletic director and Max Farrington, his counterpart at G.W., both said they are contemplating the Uline proposal.

A G.W. spokesman said, however, that he favors Uline over the Armory because it is closer to the center of town.

Arthur (Dutch) Bergman, managing director of the Armory, said yesterday, "that we won't battle with Uline for the colleges' patronage. We have never solicited the colleges to play here. They just know that the Armory is available when they want it. They come to us. That's the way it will continue."

Hoyas Edge Rutgers, 75-73, For 4th in Row

New Brunswick, N. J., Feb. 8 (AP).—John Mazziotia and Tommy O'Keefe led a brilliant Georgetown rally here last night as the Hoya quintet edged Rutgers, 75-73.

The Scarlet had a 57-44 lead with 5 minutes of the second half gone, but the two visiting stars combined to score 25 of the last 31 points.

Tied for high scoring honors with Bill (Bucky) Hatchett of Rutgers, O'Keefe and Mazziotta had 23 tallies. It was Mazziotta who netted a field goal to tie the Scarlet at 64-all with 6 minutes to play, and the 6-foot, 5-inch, center hit for another to make it 5 in a row for the Hoyas.

A 3-point play by O'Keefe put Georgetown in the lead at 72-71 and 2 fouls by Dick Falvey made the lead 74-73 as the 2-minute rule went into effect, although the score had been tied four times after Mazziotta's tying basket.

Hoya Coach (Buddy) O'Grady had his men freeze the ball, and, although Rutgers stole the ball with less than a minute to go, Georgetown was never headed. Another 40-second freeze killed all but 3 seconds, and the Scarlet's desperation attempts were broken up.

Georgetown's victory was its fourth in a row and the 10th in 15 games. Rutgers has won 6 and lost 13.

Grant, Lee Battle Again—With Gloves

Grant and Lee battle again tonight.

This time, it's Eddie Grant versus Norvel Lee for the Golden Gloves-District of Columbia AAU heavyweight championship. The site in Uline Arena where 22 finalists square off to decide the novice and senior championships.

It's the second battle between Eddie and Norvel, Lee having scored a TKO over Grant the last time they met. The scene was Griffith Stadium in the area trials for the United States Olympic team. Lee made the team.

Walcott KO's Johnson From 5 Feet Away

Philadelphia, Feb. 8 (AP).—Young Harold Johnson collapsed in the center of the ring without being hit and was counted out in the third round tonight of a scheduled 10-round bout against Jersey Joe Walcott at the Arena.

Johnson had been battling Walcott on even terms when at 1:03 of the third round he fell to the canvass and rolled over and over, obviously writhing in pain. Referee Dave Beloff waved Walcott to a neutral corner and counted the 22-year-old Negro out.

Johnson was taken to Presbyterian Hospital for further examination.

The verdict was announced as a knockout for Walcott who ruled a better than two to one favorite and held a 17-pound weight advantage. Johnson weighed 180, Walcott 197.

Johnson lay on the ring canvas for 10 minutes before Dr. Joseph I. Levey, physician for the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commision, had him removed on a stretcher.

Dr. Levey announced that a preliminary examination disclosed an injury to the intervetebral disc located in the small of the fighter's back.

It was give and take in the early moments of the third round and Johnson appeared to be holding his own.

Suddenly the slim built Johnson stopped short, winced with pain and toppled to the canvas as if hit with a blackjack. Walcott was 4 or 5 feet away when it happened and was as surprised as the 7500 fans, who paid $32,519 to see the bout.

John (Ox) Da Grosa, State athletic commissioner, announced that both purses were being held up pending an investigation of the incident. The commissioner said that what happened was "quite obvious" but that in the interest of the 7500 fans who were puzzled by the dramatic ending, he would hold a hearing tomorrow.

Several times in the past Johnson has been forced to postpone fights because of back trouble but he never encountered anything as serious as tonight's injury appeared to be. He was in great pain.

Hoyas, Terps Score Heavily In Track Meet

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Washington, D. C., entrants ran off with their share of honors at the 175th Regiment-South Atlantic Association track games here tonight.

In the mile feature, Fred Wilt, fleet-footed G-Man, won in 4:12.3, tying Tommy Quinn's meet record. Horace Ashenftleer of Penn A. C., wilted in the last lap to take second by 10 paces. John Joe Barry of Villanova did not appear because of illness.

For the Hoyas, Billy Mitchell won the 70-yard hurdles, Jim Rams took the 1000-yard open run, and the frosh team won a special mile relay. Times were 0:08.6 for Mitchell, 2:19.5 for Rams, and 3:26 for the frosh.

Maryland's 2-mile relay quartet of Tyson Creamer, Al Buehler, Lindy Kehoe and Bob set a meet record of 8:01.4 in earning its first place. And its mile team of Mario Salvanelli, Buehler, Bob Browning and Creamer won the "Monumental" in 3:29.4.

Georgetown's frosh half-miler, Carl Joyce, came within a half-step of upsetting Seton Hall's touted Phil Thigpen. Thigpen came up from last to nip Joyce at the wire in the good time of 1:54.5. Howard's Jim Bruce was fourth.

Pat O'Brien of the Hoyas took second in the 600-yard open, finishing behind Morgan State's John Triplett. Maryland's Bob Clancy and G. U.'s John Lynch were third and fourth.

Terrapin Gus Meier took second behind Baltimore Olympic Club's Earl Grim in the 1000-yard handicap, and another Old Liner, Ed Matthews, was third in the 500-yard run.

For the second time this season, Catholic U.'s mile relay team of Kernan McCurnin, Jim Field, Andy Sesik and Dick Doyle took second in a Mason-Dixon Conference special to Washington College.

Bauer Sisters Win Again in Florida Golf

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 8 (AP).—Those spectacular young Midland, Tex., charmers—Marlene and Alice Bauer—set the pace in the opening round of the fortieth annual Palm Beach Women's golf championship today with easy victories.

Alice, 22, defeated Betty Bush of Hammond, Ind., 4 and 3, after leading 4 up at the end of nine holes. Her 15-year-old sister, Marlene, turned back Mary Ann Downey, Baltimore, Md., 3 and 2.

Priddy Ends 1-Day 'Holdout,' Signs With Tigers for $28,000

Detroit, Feb. 8 (AP).—Gerry Priddy, the Detroit Tigers' new second baseman, signed his 1950 contract today for an estimated $28,000.

Priddy and General Manager Billy Evans of the Detroit club agreed on salary terms in a 20-minute meeting today after an hour-long discussion yesterday failed to bring an agreement.

Priddy, who told reporters he got $25,000 with the St. Louis Browns last season, termed his new contract "the best I've ever had." He tempered that with an assertion that "I'll be back to see Mr. Evans next year."

The Tigers reportedly offered Priddy about $27,500 yesterday but the former St. Louis and Washington second sacker held out for $30,000.

Bucknell Bows To Navy, 71-54

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Forward Joe Fitzpatrick caught fire today and powered Navy to a 71-54 basketball victory over Bucknell.

Fitz scored 22 points to lead the parade as the Midshipmen won their tenth game in 15 starts.

Stark Goes Mad Against Hargrave

Staunton Prep Star Scores 60 Points

Special Dispatch to The Post

Staunton, Va., Feb. 8.—Pat Stark, Staunton Military Academy center, shattered the Virginia prep basketball scoring record by shooting in 60 points here today.

The great preformance of the Syracuse, N. Y., native enabled Staunton to beat Hargrave Military Academy, 84-55.

A Staunton player, Harold (Red) Wolfe, set the previous record of 52 points last year, also against Hargrave.

Stark scored 34 points in the first half and 26 in the second. But his performance shouldn't have astounded observers too much. He has scored 369 points this season for a 13-game average of 28.4.

He has scored over 30 points in six different games this season, and last year, playing for Syracuse Vocational High, he scored 78 points in one game.

The victory was No. 7 in a row for defending state champion Staunton. Overshadowed by Stark's spree was the 27-point performance of Hargrave's Johnny Holt.

Man O' War in Class by Himself as Greatest Horse Since 1900

By John Chandler

NEW YORK, Feb. 8 (AP).—Man O' War, a mighty hulk of horseflesh whose blazing speed cut down rivals 30 years ago and captured the imagination of the sports world, is the greatest thoroughbred since 1900.

So say the Nation's sports writers and broadcasters, who voted overwhelmingly for "Big Red" in the Associated Press mid-century poll.

Man O' War Polled 305 of a possible 388 votes, and like his races, finished far ahead of his closest ballot opponent, Citation, with 36.

Thus, the great chestnut flyer, winner of 20 of his 21 starts, takes his place with other sports immortals of the golden 1920's—the Ruths, the Dempseys, the Tildens, the Joneses, and the Weissmullers.

The feats of Citation, acclaimed in 1948 by many horsemen the equal if not the superior of Man O' War, couldn't erase the vivid memories of 1919 and 1920 when Big Red ruled.

Man O' War didn't earn a lot of money, as the folding green is counted today. But ham 'n eggs didn't cost a dollar either when Man O' War banked $249,465 in purses—$163,140 of it during his three-year-old campaign in 1920.

Compare with the record $709,470 won by Citation during his sensational season at three. The 1948 Triple Crown champ earned $168,500 of this within 18 days at Belmont Park, with runaway victories in the Sysonby mile, Jockey Club Cup and Empire City International Gold Cup.

Only 12 horses drew votes, Whirlaway coming third with 15, and Seabiscuit fourth with 12. Others were: Exterminator, 6; Dan Patch, the pacer, 5; War Admiral, 4; Equipsosise, Assault, Protector, Rose Bud and Gallant Fox, 1 each. Stymie, world's leading money winner, didn't get a vote.

Seabiscuit was a grandson, and War Admiral a son of Man O'War.

Because of war work, the breeder of Big Red, Maj. August Belmont, disposed of him at the 1918 Saratoga yearling sales. He was taken for $5000 by Samuel D. Riddle of Glen Riddle, Pa., who later refused 1 million dollars for the horse.

Riddle and his trainer, Louis Feustel, didn't know just what they had acquired. They found out, as did the clockers at the training track. So Big Red was no secret when he went postward at odds-on his first time out at Belmont Park in June, 1919, and won easily. He was destined to be odds-on favorite—as much as 1 to 100 twice—every time he started a race. Big Red won his first six races in a row his first year.

Then came the stunner, in mid-August at Saratoga. Man O'War was the 11-10 favorite in the Sanford Memorial stakes, but aptly named Upset, with a 15-pound weight concession, handed Big Red his first and only defeat. He was caught in a pocket, came out too late to catch Upset, and was beaten half a length. They met several times again, but Upset never could repeat. The Riddle colt won nine of 10 starts in 1919.

Riddle refused to permit Man O' War to start in the Kentucky Derby the following May. He contended it was too early in the season to ask a three-year-old to tackle a mile and one quarter. Man O' War made his first 1920 outing in the Preakness, a shorter route, and won, with Upset finishing second.

Many thought his greatest race was the Potomac Handicap at Havee De Grace, when he was asked to carry 138 pounds over a mile and one sixteenth against three opponents.

The largest crowd in the track's history jammed every nook and corner," said The Baltimore Sun. Thousands deserted the mutuel windows 15 minutes before post time to seek a vantage point to view the race. Man O' War closed at 15 to 100 in the betting.

Blazes, carrying 104½, was on the rail; Paul Jones, the 1920 Derby winner, No. 2; Wildair, No. 3, and Man O' War outside. Paul Jones packed 114 pounds, and Wildair, 108.

After the first sixteenth of a mile, Blazes and Man O' War were neck and neck, with the others not far behind. Then Man O' War, under wraps, took the lead in the backstretch. Wildair challenged at the mile mark, but Big Red—not even extended—won by a length and a half. Wildair, run out, was second by 15 lengths, and Blazes third by two.

In 1920, Big Red established five American time records. His mark for a mile and three-eighths still stands as a world's record, although Historian tied the latter mark in 1946.

Game Goes Hour, 45 Minutes

It Became a Question of How Much Time

Lomira, Wis., Feb. 7 (AP).—High school basketball games don't get much closer than the one in which the Fond Du Lac, Wis., St. Mary Springs B team nosed out the Lomira Bees in one hour and 45 minutes tonight.

The regulation game ended with the score tied at 24-24.

So they played a three-minute overtime period.

No score was registered.

Another overtime period.

Still no score.

Then harried officials picked two players from each team and gave each a free throw.

Each team scored a free shot and the score was tied at 25-25.

Three from each squad were given another chance.

Same thing. Score 26-26.

Two more were given gift shots.

Here we go again. Score 27-all.

On the next round three from each team lined up and St. Mary's sank two while Lomira was blanked.

An 'Iffy' Sort of Thing

Leahy's $1,000,000 Offer So Much Talk

Detroit, Feb. 8 (AP). — Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame came up today with his explanation of a story that he had been offered a 10-year, $100,000 per, contract to coach pro football.

Leahy, here for the Detroit Times Quarterback dinner last night, said the story apparently grew out of a discussion he had in a New York restaurant a couple of weeks ago while dining with friends.

This was Leahy's version:

"We were just chatting about football when one of the party, a man who has no connection with any professional team, said he'd be glad to pay me $50,000 a year to coach a team if he had one.

"We all laughed and I told them seriously that at one stage of my career I had been offered a 10-year contract at $50,000 a year to handle a pro team. I turned that one down.

"I told the people at the dinner party that I was happy at Notre Dame and was going to finish my coaching career there."

Leahy then contined: "The friend who had made the dinner statement about wanting me at $50,000 a year wound up things by saying he'd get me even if it took $100,000 a year. That is apparently the germ from which the story was generated."

"That's all there was to it," Leahy concluded.

Berwyn Rod and Gun Club Called One of East's Best

By Ralph Murdock

Here's what happened when Maryland sportsmen just over the District line decided to form a gun club.

Murdock

They went into a huddle, elected officers and started a club which in another year will be one of the best in the East. At the present, they have over $40,000 invested in their enterprise. They named it the Berwyn Rod and Gun Club.

The growth of the club can be attributed to the cooperation and spirit of its energetic members who now total 118. Besides coughing up $30 each for initiation fees and $12 for yearly membership dues, they contributed gratis their help in erecting buildings, target traps, mixing concrete for the walks and other incidentals.

TEDDY RICHARDS has just been elected president of the club with Frank Huseman as general manager. The club is affiliated with the National Rifle Association of Washington, D. C., and boasts of two good rifle teams. Shooting at the club is conducted on Saturday and Sundays only.

The club championship will be held Sunday, February 12, when the members will blaze away at 150 targets each. A turkey shoot will start at 1 p. m.

Harry Ulinski, 220-Pound Center, Signs With Redskins

Center Harry Ulinski, 220-pound Kentucky University captain, just stopped in town long enough to sign a contract. The burly 6-foot-4 lineman immediately flew back to Lexington to attend a class.

Ulinski, Redskins' No. 4 draft choice, followed Notre Dame's Frank Spaniel into the fold. Actually, he was Washington's third choice for bolstering the center of the line. The local pros were beaten to the draw on Minnesota's Clayton Tonnemaker by Green Bay and Rice's Joe Watson by Detroit.

Ball said yesterday he's considering going to Chicago to line up eight prospective Redskins at once.

Midwesterners he'd like to land include, in the order in which they were drafted, Lou Karras, Purdue tackle; Gene Pepper, Missouri guard; Don Winslow, Iowa tackle; Bill Chauncey, Iowa State back; Lyle Button, Illinois tackle; Casimir Wituckl, Indiana guard; Joe Zuravleff, Northewestern end, and John Lundin, Minnesota guard.

In all, Ball figures he will be able to sign approximately 20 of the team's draft choices among the 1949 collegians.

Hoya Frosh Nip Marines, 65-64

Georgetown University's freshmen barely kept their undefeated record intact last night. Hugh Heins put in a layup with two and a half minute left, and the Hoya yearlings kept the ball the rest of the way to nose out Marine Headquarters, 65-64, on the Marines' court.

Bud Gainey of the Marines was high scorer with 30 points, but they weren't quite enough, and Georgetown notched its twelfth victory.

Congressmen Ask Central Transfer

By Citizens Unit

Retention Of Central Status Urged

The North Washington Council of Citizen Associations last night reaffirmed its stand of last September, favoring the retention of Central High School in its present status, and supplementing it with a junior college.

Meeting in the Sixth Precinct squad room, the group also heard John P. Sanderson, director of the hospital permit bureau of the District Health Department, point out that only four of the District's hospitals are equipped to handle emergency cases.

The group also nominated Walter M. Bird, past secretary of the council, president of the Shepherd Park Citizens Association and president of the North Washington Recreation Council, for the Junior Board of Commerce's "outstanding man of the year" award.

North Randle

The North Randle Community Citizens Association last night voted to ask the District Highway Department if Fairlawn ave. se. can be extended to Benning rd. to provide a secondary road to parallel Minnesota ave.

The association also indorsed the action of the Southeast Council in opposing the opening of draw bridges across the Anacostia River during rush hours except in cases of emergency.

Kenneth G. Read, vice president of the association, presided at the meeting.

There's a five-million-dollar reason for transferring Central High School from the white to the Negro school system here, the House District Appropriations Subcommittee told the Washington Board of Education yesterday.

The message was contained in a letter from Chairman Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) of the subcommittee to C. Melvin Sharpe, school board president. The transfer plan, recommended by the board's committee on buildings and grounds, is to be subject of a public hearing in the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K nw., at 10 a. m. Friday.

Bates' subcommittee, which plays a major role in the control of District's municipal purse-strings, is demanding the use of white Central by Negro pupils of Cardozo.

Bates' letter said the transfer should be permanent.

"The only alternative is to expend approximately five million dollars for the acquisition of a site and construction of a new high school plant in the same area at a time when it has been found necessary to impose a sales tax upon the people of the District," the letter said.

Bates declared construction needs for buildings other than senior high schools "will tax the resources of the District to the limit for some years to come."

He said the subcommittee had considered a small item for repair of the Cardozo building, and had decided to spend no more on the present structure until it is vacated and a survey made to determine what remodeling is needed.

The letter stated the present Cardozo building is "entirely obsolete" for senior high school use, while Central is operating "far below" capacity enrollment.

Howard Wrestlers Pin Sailors, 18-14

Howard University won its third wrestling match in four starts, 18-14, over the Naval Receiving Station last night at Anacostia.

John Carter, 235-pound Howard heavyweight, pinned Navy's Dick (Humphrey) Mathys in 11:30 of the second period with a body press to win the decisive match.

Scout Birthday Celebrated by Youth Leaders

More than 300 youth leaders from Washington and 17 adjacent counties last night observed the fortieth anniversary of scouting in America at a dinner in the National Press Club.

Chief speakers at the program commemorating the incorporation in the District of the Boy Scouts of America on February 8, 1910, were Amory Houghton of Corning, N. Y., president of B. S. A., and Dr. Arthur A. Schuck of New York, chief scout executive.

Houghton, chairman of the board of the Corning Glass Works, described scouting as "the great youth movement of the world." In his address, he paid tribute to the memory of the late Colin H. Livingstone of Washington, one of the founders and the first president.

Richard E. Shands, president of the National Capital Area Council, presided at the meeting, at which District Court Judge James R. Kirkland was toastmaster.

Earlier in the day Scout Robert J. Deruntz, 17, of Granite City, Ill., reported that the B. S. A. had experienced its greatest membership gain in 1949—16.7 percent, or some 368,000 new members. Total membership is now 2,579,515 boys and adult leaders.

Deruntz, one of 12 National Boy Scout Week delegates who also attended the dinner last night before leaving for Philadelphia, spoke at a breakfast in the Hotel Washington. Later the 12 delegates visited President Truman.

Virginia Gets Bills to Reduce Income Taxes

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Proposals for additional tax changes, poll tax repeal and a central agency to prepare standard plans for school buildings were offered in the Virginia General Assembly today.

The two new tax proposals came from Senators Andrew Clarke of Alexandria, and Garland Gray of Waverly. Clarke's bill would afford some income tax reduction by increasing exemptions for single persons from $1000 to $1500 and for married persons from $2000 to $3000. The allowance for dependents would remain $200 except that a widow or widower with a minor child would get an exemption of $3000.

Follows Tax Study Plan

Gray's bill followed the recommendations of the tax study commission which he headed, and would provide the same exemptions for State income tax payers which they get from the Federal Government. The effect would be to increase State income taxes except in the case of families with more than four children.

The poll tax repeal resolution was sponsored by Delegate Walter Page of Norfolk. It would simply amend the constitution to abolish payment of the tax as a prerequisite to voting and would leave it up to the General Assembly to prescribe the time of registration. No changes would be made in the present registration system.

To carry out its purpose, the Page resolution would have to be approved by this Assembly, by the Assembly of 1952 and then by the people in a referendum.

Clear Cut Issue

Page said it would present a clear cut issue of abolishing the tax as a prerequisite to the right to vote and would have none of the complexity of the Campbell amendments defeated in the referendum last fall.

Page said no change is made in the power of the General Assembly to levy a head tax of $1.50 for schools and the Assembly would not be able to increase it beyond $1.50. However, it would have nothing to do with voting.

The bill for a central agency to prepare standard plans for school buildings was offered in the House by Delegate Mills E. Godwin, of Suffolk, who expressed the belief that it would save the counties and cities nearly five million dollars in the large school program about to get underway with 45 million dollars in grants to localities by the State. Godwin would have the group within an existing State agency to prepare many standard plans from which localities could choose, just as homeowners do from standard plans for houses. If localities match the 45 million dollars in State grants, as he said many will do, Godwin said the architectual fees on this amount of construction would be $4,500,000. Architectural and engineering advice would be furnished free to the localities.

Godwin estimated the central agency would cost the State's general fund about $750,000.

Royal Arch Masons Elect Wilson as Grand High Priest

The Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons last night elected Thomas R. Wilson, of 4441 Burlington pl. nw., grand high priest of the District body.

Wilson

Wilson, who is director of the area's division, Office of International Trade, Department of Commerce, succeeds John G. Mathes.

George E. Umhau was elected to succeed Wilson as deputy grand high priest at the annual convocation held in the Masonic Temple, 801 13th st. nw.

Three officers of the District Grand Lodge were elected officers of the Royal Arch Chapter; Marvin E. Fowler, grand master, named grand king; Aubrey H. Clayton, grand secretary, and John C. Palmer, grand chaplain, elected to similar positions in the Royal Arch chapter.

Other officers include: Herbert W. Ludwig, grand scribe; John A. Colburn, sr., grand treasurer; Lucien G. Yung, grand visitor and lecturer; John A. Hart, grand captain of the host; John T. Vivian, grand principal sojourner; LaFayette Price, grand Royal Arch captain; Arthur F. Zepp, grand master of the third veil; John E. Chrisman, grand master of the second veil; Emerson B. Wise, grand master of the first veil, and John L. Allen, grand sentinel.

Ohio Town Quarantines All Children for Week

North Lewisburg, Ohio, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Board of Health today placed all children under 18 years of age in North Lewisburg under a seven-day quarantine.

The quarantine makes it illegal for children to go outside their homes, day or night, for the full week.

Dr. David H. Moore, county health commissioner, said 22 known cases of scarlet fever have been uncovered in this village of 700 persons.

Lake Near D. C. And 566 Acres Are for Sale

The Alexandria Water Co's. Barcroft reservoir — a 114-acre lake — was put up for sale yesterday, together with 566 surrounding acres of some of the best undeveloped land in Fairfax County.

The 100-year-old reservoir is being sold, explained Howard C. Richards, water company manager, because its 800-million gallons capacity has become inadequate.

By mid-summer, he said, the company hopes to have its new water supply system at Occoquan in operation. The new facilities, he reported, will store twice the capacity of Lake Barcroft.

Terms of the sale will include a provision that the water company may use Lake Barcroft as a water source for the rest of 1950, according to Richards.

Located a mile southwest of Bailey's Crossroads and fronting 2430 feet on old Columbia pike, the lake has 5 miles of shoreline. The adjoining 566 acres are rolling, high woodland. Nearby are these developments: Ravenwood, Sleepy Hollow, Nalbrook, Holmes Run, Lakewood and Columbia Pines.

The property is offered for sale by Joseph P. Day, Inc., a New York City firm of realtors. Richards declined to disclose the asking price. The firm, he said, "is looking for a buyer."

According to James J. Corbalis, jr., Fairfax County sanitary engineer, the property would not be easily adapted to development of low-cost housing. "It's not topographically suited," he said.

Custom - built homes—homes costing around $50,000—would be the most feasible type of development, Corbalis said.

Herbert F. Schumann, jr., counting planning engineer, said he knew of no plans to buy up the land for recreational use.

'Eye' Plays Here Saturday

Villanova's Arizin Makes Up For Late Basketball Start

Paul Arizin of Villanova, who was late in developing as a basketball player, is catching up fast. He's the Nation's third ranking scorer, hot on the heels of Chet Giermak of William and Mary and George Senesky of St. Joseph's.

Arizin is bringing his excellent 22.1 average to the National Guard Armory here Saturday night when Villanova tackles Georgetown in the first game of an 8 o'clock double-header. In the nightcap, George Washington meets Duke, leader of the Southern Conference.

The amazing thing about Arizin is he wasn't good enough to make the basketball squad at LaSalle High in Philadelphia. And he didn't get any recognition at Villanova either, until his sophomore year.

Matter of fact, his purpose in going to Villanova wasn't to play basketball. He wanted to major in arts and sciences there, and he has kept up the straight "A" average he compiled in high school.

Since Wildcat Coach Al Severance drafted Arizin off a Philadelphia church league team, Paul has been a hot number. As a soph, he led the team in scoring with 267, and last year he had 594.

He didn't pick his spots either. Against Kentucky's All-America Alex Groza in the N.C.A.A. tournament last year, the 6-foot, 3-inch lad fired in 30 points. And against Yale's heralded Tony Lavelli in the same tourney, Paul scored 22.

He has already been properly introduced to Georgetown. Last year, when Villanova came to town, Hoya Coach Elmer Ripley assigned John Mazziotta and John Kelly to guard him. But Arizin, with his tricky pivots and jump shots, put in 24 points as the eighth-ranked Wildcats romped, 64-49.

This season, Villanova is unranked in the nation's polls, but has a creditable 15-3 record, and the second highest pointmaking average, 73.1. Only the No. 1 club of the United States, Holy Cross, has done better. And only Bradley, Kentucky and Louisville, ranked in the top 13, have whipped the Wildcats.

The 21-year-old senior will be bearing down against the Hoyas. He's only a half-point behind Giermak, who leads the colleges in scoring averages.—HERB HEFT.

House Group Ignores Leave Controversy in First '50 Bill Approved

The full House Appropriations Committee yesterday ignored the annual leave controversy in approving its first bill this year.

However, it did cut in half the new money sought by the Tennessee Valley Authority to meet the cost of last year's pay raises for 5400 of its employes.

The urgent deficiency bill, reported by the committee, recommended 10 percent cuts in funds requested by the Atomic Energy Commission, Tennessee Valley Authority and the Veterans' Administration. Only a small amount of the money involved would be used for personnel.

A subcommittee headed by Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) conducted the hearings. Thomas has threatened to force the independent agencies to (1) wipe out all accumulated annual leave by July 1, and (2) to absorb the cost of last year's pay raises out of available funds. VA, TVA and AEC are among the twoscore independent agencies.

TVA officials testified that the total cost of the pay raise was $760,000, but they proposed to finance $395,000 of it from corporate funds. The committee recommended an appropriation of $182,500, but presumably the remaining pay raise cost could be paid from corporate funds, money not appropriated by Congress.

TVA officials were quizzed at length on their agency's annual leave policy, but at no time did committee members tell them to knock out all accrued vacations by July 1. They estimated it would cost six million dollars to pay off annual leave accumulated by 9000 TVA employes. This six million is carried on the agency's books as a liability and it is an increase of $665,000 over the past year.

George F. Gant, TVA general manager, testified that several studies had been made of leave practices and they showed the employes were not abusing the privilege. "The large accumulation now on the books," he explained, "is due almost exclusively to the wartime experience and it is only in rare cases now where employes are not able to take most of their annual leave."

The leave or pay raise questions did not come up during hearings on VA or Atomic Energy.

STORY: This one is making the rounds of Federal agencies. A Federal worker died and went to Heaven. He looked around for awhile and appeared unhappy. St. Peter went up and asked him what the trouble was.

"I don't find any of my old friends up here. What's happened to them?"

St. Peter asked him where he had worked while he was on earth . . . "In the Government in Washington," the former employe answered.

"Oh, I know why you can't find your friends," St. Peter said. "They're all out for coffee. They'll be back."

POSTAL BILL: The Johnston bill to boost the salaries of postmasters and supervisors got another big boost yesterday. It was indorsed by John A. McMahon, president of the National Association of Postal Supervisors, Floyd A. Bishop, of the National League of District Postmasters, and a dozen other employe representatives. The full Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee may trim down the cost of the measure but it is sure to get committee approval.

NOTES: Leon A. LeBuffe, an analyst at the Maritime Commission, will retire the end of this month after 45 years of service. He's the oldest Maritime employe in length of service. LeBuffe has never been late for work and over one 10-year span he didn't take a day of sick leave . . . New employes at the Army Medical Center here are Daniel Magruder, Litchfield Adkins, Renee A. Fenton Elaine Higgins Joseph C. Kastner Charlie Williams, Theodore Barber and Nathaniel Moore . . . A group of Agriculture employes have formed a new Employes Service Center in a 10-room house at 331 11th st. sw. . . . At General Services, Richard K. Baisch has been elected president of its AFGE lodge. Theodore Tatum is vice president and Frank Day, secretary.

Wife Turned 'Copper' on Him, Says Keleher

Admits 'Dealings' With Big Gambler But Denies They Concerned Betting

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher, once a bigtime gambler who claims he has been "legitimate" for two years, yesterday accused his estranged wife of turning "copper" against him.

With an emotion-filled voice, the suave husband protested in District Court that he is an old and lonely man who wants to "go home" but that the wife, Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher irrevocably closed the door by her "arrogance" and by betraying him to authorities.

It was the second day of the trial before Judge Charles F. McLaughlin of Mrs. Keleher's suit for a limited divorce based on cruelty. Her suit will be followed by trial of Keleher's demand for an absolute divorce on a desertion charge.

Mrs. Keleher Absent

The 51-year-old Mrs. Keleher was home ill while 68-year-old Dapper Jack testified he was through with the marriage. He was answering her asserton of the day before that she was willing to live with him again, despite their four-year separation.

Meanwhile, the names of reputed members of Washington's betting fraternity entered the case. Keleher denied that he knew Abe Plisco, alias Jewboy Dietz, but admitted an acquaintance with the late James LaFontaine and Sam Beard, local gamblers of a bygone era.

Also, Keleher admitted he had dealings in the past with Frank Erickson, perhaps the biggest bookmaker in the country. He denied that gambling had anything to do with the numerous long-distance telephone calls that he made last year to John L. Sullivan, a Texas oilman.

Keleher said that he called these men only to discover whether the "transactions" he had with them in 1946 could aid him in his fight to escape a delinquency demand of $35,000 in Federal income taxes.

Earns $20,000

Keleher admits he earns $20,000 a year, but said it comes entirely from investments. He pays Mrs. Keleher $100 weekly under a court order.

Mrs. Keleher's attorney, James J. Laughlin, asked Keleher why he doesn't go back to Mrs. Keleher at her Woodley Park Towers apartment. It was then that after four hours of testifying Keleher became ruffled. He said:

"How can I? Last year, Judge Tamm (Edward T. Tamm of District Court) cleared the courtroom to see if my wife and I couldn't adjust things, but she took the same arrogant attitude that I don't know what I'm talking about.

"I even had a priest see her and she lied to him. I told him that there is nothing I wouldn't do to take her and go home.

"Afraid of Her Now"

"But I'm afraid of her now. She might poison me.

"When I told her I was out in the street with a green sock and a blue one, she laughed," he continued. "I told her I couldn't make it by myself—she laughed. Every man knows to what he is entitled," Keleher said.

"Why don't you give up Dorothy Blake?" asked Laughlin, referring to Keleher's constant companion.

Keleher replied hotly, "Because I have no one else. I have to have someone in my life. I have been alone for four years. My home for four years has been a hotel room."

Keleher said Mrs. Blake was a fine person but he denied that he suppoorted her, spent the night with her, sent her love letters, valentines or presents, or even hugged her or stole a kiss from her. It was coincidence, Keleher said, that he and Mrs. Blake have been together—but at different hotels—in Miami Beach and Atlantic City.

Keleher admitted using Mrs. Blake's telephone in her apartment at 2480 16th st. nw., but denied it was for gambling purposes.

Police Trap Gets Results

The informant whispered his tip over a beer.

"He'll be going out Lee Hwy. about noon," he husked, "and he'll have the day's number receipts for the Arlington collection point."

So, at about noon yesterday when the suspect car drove north on Lee hwy., Lieut. Edward Simpson and Officer Henry Trumbull of the Falls Church police force trailed behind.

Further along the road, Officer Ralph Adams in another cruiser was stopping traffic.

The trap closed on the suspect. On him, were five numbers slips and $3.21.

The suspect, Cletus William Johnson, 31, of 412 Liberty st., Falls Church, was charged with possession of numbers slips and released in $50 bond for appearance in Falls Church Police Court next Tuesday.

Couldn't Live Without Wife, He Shoots Self

He couldn't live without the wife who was divorcing him, so William Bodiford, 49, killed himself with a bullet in the stomach yesterday.

The shooting occurred in the basement of a home at 149 Forrester st. sw., where Bodiford had been living since his estrangement with his wife, Thelma.

Relatives told police the wife was to have received her divorce last Friday but there had been a delay. However the decree had been expected any day.

Mrs. Bodiford and her two children, Edward, 9, and Darlene, 6, have been living at the home of her mother, Mrs. Cassie McGee, at 715 6th st. nw.

Mrs. McGee said Bodiford telephoned her several days ago and threatened suicide unless there was a reconciliation.

The body was discovered at 4:35 p. m. by Bodiford's 8-year-old nephew, James W. Patterson, who had gone to the basement to put away his school books.

Police said Bodiford apparently had shot himself while sitting in a chair, using the claw of a hammer to pull the trigger of a Winchester rifle that was pressed into his stomach. He then toppled onto the floor on top of the rifle.

On a nearby shelf, police said, was a penciled page and a half note addressed to Bodiford's family.

Bodiford was a World War I veteran and had been employed as an electrician at the Naval Gun Factory. His wife is employed as a film inspector by Warner Brothers.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Legal Action To Be Sought On Pinballs

Arlington Attorney Plans 2 Moves to Outlaw Machines

Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker said yesterday he will take legal action in two or three weeks to rid Arlington County of pinball machines.

It was Rucker's latest statement in his war with Hirsh de La Viez, Washington coin machine operator, who has installed pinball games in Arlington.

"We will within the next two or three weeks file a proceeding to have pinball machines declared illegal," said Rucker, "or will propose for passage a local ordinance declaring pinball machines and similar devices a public nuisance and making their posession unlawful."

Meanwhile, it was learned that Arlington police in recent weeks have been compiling a list of places where the machines are located.

Rucker said the second step, an ordinance outlawing the machines as a nuisance, would be the more likely one.

Such an ordinance, he declared, could be presented to the county board, probably at its meeting February 25, and would provide a penalty up to $300 fine or 30 days in jail or both.

Marine, Wife Flown To Visit Ill Son Here

A Marine Corps plane on "compassion mission" yesterday brought PFC and Mrs. Anthony Guarino here from Jacksonville, N. C., to visit their 10-month-old son, James, critically ill with anemia at the Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital.

The baby was hospitalized here last November after being flown in with the parents in the private plane of Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Franklin A. Hart, who was enroute here on a business trip.

'Ball Fumbled on Home Rule,' Seven Congressmen Charge

Seven Republican House members charged yesterday that the Democratic administration has "fumbled the ball" on the Washington home rule bill.

The seven members then appealed to their Republican House colleagues to join in the drive to drag the bill out of the District Commitee where it has been bottled up since last year, and put it to a vote.

The home rule bill, approved last spring by the Senate, was later tabled by the House District Committee. It is now the target of a discharge petition that would take the measure away from the District Committee and present it to a House vote. The petition now has 134 of the required 218 House signers.

The new appeal for Republican support in the discharge move was made in a letter signed by these members: Reps. Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), Thor C. Tollefson (R., Wash.), Robert J. Corbett (R., Pa.), Gardner R. Withrow (R., Wis.), Usher L. Burdick (R., N. D.), Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.), and Clifford P. Case (R., N. J.).

None of the seven is a member of the District committee. Of the nine Republicans on the District committee, only Rep. James C. Auchincless (R., N. J.) has announced so far that he has signed the home rule discharge petition.

The seven said they had all signed, and asked their colleagues to do the same.

Basic opposition to home rule, their letter charged, "comes from those who are opposed to civil rights legislation.

"Republicans have here an opportunity to enact this measure and demonstrate by action instead of words that we can secure passage of civil rights legislation despite the studied lassitude of the sharply divided majority party," the letter said. "They have left a fumbled ball on the field and we can pick it up and score the victory."

To date, their letters pointed out, Republicans are in the minority on the discharge petition.

Their letter also cited (1) support for the home rule idea carried in the 1948 Republican platform; (2) the backing for the bill given by the Senate Republican Policy Committee and its chairman, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio); and (3) the fact that Representative Auchincloss fathered the home rule plan in the Republican Eightieth Congress.

Patriotic Unit to Elect

The District Committee for Observance of "I Am An American Day" will meet to elect officers at 4 p. m. today in the District Building board room, 14th and E sts. nw.

Husband Kills Wife With Bayonet Thrust

statement to police he said the impaling was "accidental."

Authorities at Camp Lee, Va., said that Ramey had received an "undesirable discharge" February 3, as a "chronic absentee." He served three years as a seaman in the Navy during the war, and had been an Army recruit since August, 1948. He was arrested in 1944 for unauthorized use of an auto, and in 1948 for investigation.

A coroners jury of six men listened to six witnesses yesterday and ordered Ramey held after deliberating only 17 minutes.

Details of the fatal stabbing were disclosed by Private Edwin C. Coppage of No. 5 Precinct.

"We got the first call at 12:57 a. m.; we got there and heard music blaring from a radio. A woman met us at the door and told us there had been a party but it was all over. And we left. Everything seemed to be in order," he testified.

Second Call at 1:09

"The second call came at 1:09 a. m., this time of a stabbing. We saw the same girl and this time four or five others. We went into the bathroom and this time found a girl on the floor. She had been stabbed."

Throughout the inquest, Ramey sat with his head in his hands, sobbing occasionally. On his left hand he carried the ironic tattoo "Buck and Maytriss for" and on his fingers, the letters "E-V-E-R."

"Ramey told me he had had several little spats with his wife throughout the evening. He said she ran into the bathroom and locked the door and he tried to get in.

"Then he said he reached into a closet and got out this Japanese rifle, attached the bayonet and went through the door," Coppage said.

Leaned Against Door

Evidence indicated that Mrs. Ramey, a large woman of 193 pounds and 5 feet 8 inches tall, was leaning against the bathroom door from the inside. Ramey, a slight man of less than 125 pounds, was apparently unable to force the door.

A thin triangular slit in the plywood door was 3 feet 9 inches above the floor. The bayonet entered Mrs. Ramey's back 3 feet 11 inches from the sole of her feet. The 18-inch blade ripped upward from a point below her left shoulder for 10 inches through her heart and left lung, according to deputy coroner, Dr. Richard Rosenberg.

Mrs. Ramey is a native of Standardsville, Va. He is from Strasburg, Va.

Sergt. Lionel Couture testified that Ramey had given him this story:

"Ramey returned to his wife with the party shortly after 8 p. m., after having been gone since 1 p. m. They had some words. Ramey thought he saw his wife and the two other women go into the bathroom together. He said he was afraid that they would fight with his wife and hammered to be let in. He got the bayonet and rapped on the door again. He said he fixed the bayonet because he wanted to scarce the girls."

Then Ramey said he drove the bayonet through the door, Couture testified.

"The door opened Mrs. Ramey stood there a minute and then collapsed almost immediately without saying anything," Couture said Raymey told him.

Details Described

The sordid details of the ill-fated birthday party were described by four of the five persons who attended the celebration.

Mrs. Ramey's death was preceded by five hours of drinking, "scrapping," "wrestling," "fussing," "cutting up," "carrying on" and "kissing," according to their testimony.

Douglas L. "Pete" Ramey, 24, unemployed and the defendant's brother, said the party started at a Southeast cafe at 5:30 p. m. without his sister-in-law. The party adjourned to a Northeast cafe, thence to a friend's house, from there to a liquor store, then to a grocery store and finally to the Ramey apartment.

"Buck and May had a few words when we arrived. She wanted to know where he had been on her birthday. She fussed about it for a few minutes, but it was all taken care of and they got to kidding and kissing and wrestling around.

"When he said his wife was hurt, I figured she had fainted. His wife has fainting spells. And then everybody was hollering and crying and he was saying please don't die, he needed her, he loved her; things like that."

Next witness was Mrs. Marjorie Feeney, 22, unemployed, 1814 Maryland ave. ne., who told of hearing May shout, "'O, my back.' I got her some water and a cold cloth for her head and helped undress her."

Third witness was Mrs. Jean Fleming, 22, unemployed, 2846 Knox ter., se.. She said she tore off Mrs. Ramey's midriff dress. "I put her head in my lap."

The Ramey children, Virgil Randolph, 2, and Helen Marie, 1, were taken by police early this morning to the apartment of their grandparent. Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Ramey, 729 8th st. se.

Humphrey Files New Bill For Federal Worker Politics

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) yesterday introduced a new bill for letting Federal employes take part in local politics.

He suggested it might provide the way out of a dispute over a Senate-approved plan for reopening the way for civil service employes to take part in local party politics in nearby Maryland and Virginia communities.

A joint congressional conference committee was to meet on the disputed legislation today, but postponed the session until Friday, February 17.

Humphrey suggested the disputed section on local politics by Federal employes be dropped from the legislation by the conference group.

At the same time, a strong appeal for conference approval of the local political activity plan was forwarded to members of the committee by Democratic and Republican leaders of nearby Maryland and Virginia counties.

When the House passed the bill last year, its single section was designed to permit lighter punishments than mandatory discharge for Federal employes who violate the Hatch clean politics act.

The Senate approved an addition, first drafted by Arlington County Democratic leaders, to permit civil service employes to take part in local politics on a party basis in the communities in the vicinity of Washington where 10 percent or more of the voters work for the Federal or District government, and in communities elsewhere where a majority of voters are Federal employes.

Arlington non-partisan group leaders are protesting the plan, as are some other groups. Humphrey said his bill would permit Federal workers to take part in local politics wherever they live. It would retain the Hatch Act's political activity bans on Federal workers only for Presidential, Congressional and State-wide elections.

Kluttz Tells of Jobs For Verbatim Reporters

Opportunities for verbatim reporters in Government service were discussed last night by Jerry Kluttz, Federal Diary reporter for The Washington Post, at a meeting of the Washington Chapter, Association Stenotypists of America.

About 60 stenotypists attended the session in the Green Room of the Raleigh Hotel.

Rep. Teague Would Curb Diplomatic Immunity

Wants to Deprive Lesser Embassy Employes of Often Abused Privileges

Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) said yesterday he is planning to sponsor legislation to reduce drastically the number of persons with diplomatic immunity in Washington.

Teague, a member of the special House committee investigating problems of Washington crime and law enforcement, said traffic violations and other incidents involving those with diplomatic immunity have been a nuisance to Washington police.

He said the bill would be designed to end diplomatic immunity privileges for minor employes of embassies and legations—he said he has no thought of applying it to upper-level diplomatic officials.

Lesser Employes Blamed

The lesser employes have abused their privilege the most. The problem involves mainly traffic offenses, he said—speeding, illegal parking—with a sprinkling of abusive language and talking-back to police officers.

Police officials said they receive a monthly list from the State Department of persons entitled to diplomatic immunity under the District code.

A State Department official explained that there are two lists. The first includes some 800 to 900 top-level diplomatic officials—Ambassadors, Ministers, attaches, first, second and third secretaries. The families of these officials also share in the immunity, and about double the total.

Some Domestics Included

The second list runs to some 2000 lesser employes, but does not include their families — clerks, stenographers, janitors and others employed in embassies and legations, plus domestics employed by the persons on the first list.

Parallel setups are generally provided for American diplomatic personnel abroad. State Department officials indicated some concern that juggling with the Washington setup might throw a cloud over diplomatic-immunity privileges given American missions abroad. Teague said he would consult with State Department officials before introducing his bill.

Some leaders of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington have expressed concern about the abuse of immunity privileges by minor employes, and have indicated they might assent to a decrease in the number of those given immunity.

Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) of the Special Crime Investigating Subcommittee, yesterday said his group will resume at 10 a. m. today its quizzing of top Metropolitan Police officials.

The hearing is open to the public in Room 445 of the Old House Office Building.

Cool to Night Police Court

Meanwhile, reactions were far from enthusiastic yesterday on the recommendation to the committee by Inspector Floyd S. Truscott, assistant superintendent of police, that night Police Court be held.

Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court, said that with the present number of judges on the bench it would be impossible to have night sessions.

"You can't expect people to work all day and then all night," the judge said. "I don't know any member of Congress who works 24 hours."

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said he would give his opinion when he testifies before the committee, reportedly late this week.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence said he favors making the commissioner post a full-time, salaried position.

Solo Hints Great Future For Cellist

By Paul Hume

John Martin, first cellist of the National Symphony Orchestra, made his initial solo bow with his fellow musicians last night. It is assuredly the first of many to come.

Martin played the intricate solo part in Richard Strauss' graphic tone poem, Don Quixote. Surely this is the greatest and most human of the mighty six works Strauss cast in this form. (We cannot count Macbeth with the others.)

The voice of Cervantes' hero is heard in the cello throughout the piece. Mingling with it are the notes of the solo viola as Sancho Panza. The violin, too, has its long solo lines. Tomasow and Norman Lamb played these with real art.

The burden of narration rests with the cello. Martin played the instrument on which Howard Mitchell played for years. From it he drew the richest, most noble tone. With it he created a picture of the chivalrous knight, pining to win the fair Dulcinea.

Young as he is, John Martin played with real style and the feeling of a master. The intricacies of the score are not its greatest moments. The way he sang the final pages of the work marked him for a great future. We hope he will spend it in Washington.

The orchestra played the complex parts of the music with skill and beautiful tone. In the midst of things there came chords that were not quite in tune—unfortunately the two last chords were in this class. But the conception of the work in Mitchell's hands was a broad one, full of subtle inflections and insight.

Preceding the Strauss the orchestra played Mendelssohn's fourth symphony, called the Italian. It moved at a bright pace, troubled from time to time by the horns, who redeemed themselves in the middle movements. Throughout the symphony, the strings shone with luster.

Next week: Jorge Bolet in Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto.

John L. Scanlan, 57, associate chief and legal adviser of the State Department's passport division and an authority on citizenship and passport laws, died yesterday at Georgetown University Hospital.

Mr. Scanlan

A native of Washington, Mr. Scanlan lived at 1812 Upshur st. nw. He had been a State Department officer for 35 years.

His death was announced by Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who said at his press conference that Mr. Scanlan was a well-known expert in his field and a man of great patience and kindliness.

Secretary Acheson said "he will be greatly missed, not only in the department, but in the inter-departmental committees on which he served and by the many private citizens who sought his advice on their complex citizenship problems."

Mr. Scanlan was educated in the District schools, received his LL.B. degree from Georgetown University in 1916 and his LL.M. from Columbus University School of Law here in 1930. He was a member of the District Bar Association.

Entering the State Department in 1915, Mr. Scanlan became assistant passport agent in New York in 1917, and during World War I was a vice consul in the American Embassy in Paris.

He was recalled to the department in 1919 and had since served successively as special assistant, drafting officer, assistant chief and technical adviser and finally as associate chief and legal adviser of the passport division.

Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. Saturday at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, 16th st. and Park rd. nw. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Joy Scanlan; his mother, Mrs. Lillian M. Scanlan; two daughters, Margaret Frances and Mary Joy Scanlan, and a son, John J. Scanlan, jr., all of Washington. He is also survived by two brothers, William F. and Leo V. Scanlan, and two sisters, Mrs. Catherine Lunsford and Mrs. Mary Grady.

Guide to Glamour

Good Clothes Are an Investment in Beauty

Here is advice on glamour from an expert—Terry Hunt, a conditioner of Hollywood stars. Among his clients are Rita Hayworth, Joan Crawford, Shirley Temple. Betty Grable says: "Terry Hunt has helped more stars keep their names on theater marquees than most directors."

This is the fifth of six articles.

By Terry Hunt

HOW often you have heard a woman say, "I don't have a thing to wear." Yet she needs six closets for her clothes.

Many women are "clothes poor." They have hundreds of dollars tied up in clothes that they never wear, simply because they do not "feel right" in them.

Clothes are an investment. Women should get their money's worth out of them, but they never will unless they first study the subject in relation to their needs.

The average woman needs three types of clothing: for work (or school), for play, for parties.

The clothes for each phase of her daily life should fit the need at all times. Unless you work where a uniform is needed, working clothes should be suitable for street wear as well as for informal calls.

Should Be Clothes That Will Wear

THEY should be clothes that will wear well, that can be cleaned and pressed easily and at a minimum cost. They must be kept neat. They should definitely not be conspicuous.

They should be easy to get into and out of, so that getting dressed won't be a nerve-wracking job. It is not necessary to have a great many outfits if you will keep them fresh and clean. A new outfit is seldom noticed, but a soiled one is.

And now for the party! To put a lot of money into a dress that is worn only a few times seems a great waste, but women do it anyway.

This isn't too bad a practice if you are careful to select a dress that suits your type and won't be "dated."

Tulle and Chiffon For Graduate, Bride

IF YOU are about to graduate or be a bride, then go ahead—indulge yourself with yards and yards of tulle and chiffon. You'll probably want to put the dress away in tissue paper and preserve it anyway.

But if you want a party dress, one that will look smart and modern, select something subdued enough so that on second wearing your friends won't say, "Here comes Mabel," long before you are near enough to be recognize by your friends.

There have been women in Hollywood who have been rated on the list of best-dressed women, and yet they owned exactly one evening gown!

Small girls usually envy tall, well-developed girls, but there is no reason why they should.

They can look just as smart, if they will avoid the obvious pitfalls for their type. These pitfalls are bows and ruffles.

If you are already "cute," you don't need them. If you aren't, they won't do the trick.

Small Girls Can Wear Any Style

SMALL GIRLS can wear any style that is becoming to the taller girls, if they will modify it. They must wear smaller hats, smaller veils, smaller bustles, less train, less fullness, fewer and smaller accessories. Keep everything on a doll-house scale.

GREER GARSON
"... dress that suits your type"

And above all, the small girl should rule out pastel colors. Forget pink and blue, especially. You may be small but you aren't a baby, so don't remind people of one. Go in for strong color combinations; you're small, so there won't be too much of it.

Wear small prints in the daytime, dramatic large prints for evening. Never attempt a large print before 8 o'clock at night.

The tall, thin girl with the delicate features can wear anything the diminutive girl can wear.

She is tiny but she is tall. If she is thin, she should fill in, or, at least, not expose. Suits and coats should be built up with padded shoulders and wide sleeves.

Skirts should flare gently from the waist rather than from the hips. For this type of girl, prints would be more flattering than solid colors.

Tall Girl's Rules Include Long Jackets

GENERAL rules for the tall girl are: Straight tunics, contrasting yokes, long jackets or peplums, sloping shoulders, fluid draperies, romantic capes, large picture hats, two-tone suits.

Whoever said that the thin girl should not wear sweaters just didn't stop to realize that there are many kinds of sweaters.

The too-thin girl merely selects the type that isn't form-fitting and has collars and yokes and puff sleeves if worn for a blouse. If worn as a jacket, she selects a type made of coarse yarns.

For evening the thin girl should not go decollete. If she wants short sleeves, she should see that they are the bat-wing or butterfly sleeve, rather than the set-in sleeve.

If she wants a medium-low neckline, she should wear a necklace. If she wants a form-fitting gown, let her see that the fitting is achieved by shirring rather than by cutting.

The stocky girl should avoid shiny fabrics, large prints, bright colors, detail around the waist and hips, very short boleros, all-around pleated skirts, and contrasting or two-toned suits.

The too-heavy girl should remember that any shade or material which reflects light will make her look broader, and any shade or material which absorbs light will make her look smaller.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Married Man's Gallantry to Girl, 20, Who Works With Him Is Causing Office Gossip; She Asks How Tactfully to Set Him Straight

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 20 years old and employed in an office with several other persons—three women and three married men, one of whom is a newcomer to the staff. He is 25 years of age and has a child four years old.

In the two months he has been here, Hugh has taken an interest in me and has behaved fondly to such an extent that my fellow employes are remarking sarcastically about it to me, insinuating that I am leading him on, and hinting that I should remember he is a married man.

This is a very friendly office staff and naturally our work keeps us in daily contact, and if I am doing or saying anything that "leads him on," I assure you it is unawarely, and not meant in the way he is taking it, because I have no such intentions.

Girl Denies Any Interest in Him

HE VERY plainly goes out of his way to chauffeur me back and forth to work at the noon hour, and in the office signifies his feelings for me indirectly, in little things he says and does. This is somewhat intangible, something one can't easily explain, but I alone can sense the feelings behind his actions—the way a girl does, without being able to explain in sentence form.

Since this triangle is very obvious to the staff, and I have to work with the man who is causing it, I urgently want your advice on how to tell him, tactfully, that his affections for me must cease, because he is married and his attentions rightfully belong to his wife and child and shouldn't be focused on me—a young single girl who has no interest in him whatsoever, and wouldn't have if he were eligible. He just isn't my type. Please answer in the very near future. E. P.

Girl Isn't Aware of Her Decision

DEAR E. P.: It is absurd to claim that you aren't encouraging Hugh's interest, if you permit him to chauffeur you to and from lunch every working day; and if you accept this special courtesy on the tacit understanding (which you admit exists) that he is very fond of you in a romantic way.

Just as you sense the gist of his feeling, so does he sense your awareness of his sentiments. And since he knows that you know the nature of his attitude, and knows also that you know he is married, and yet finds you willing to pair off with him habitually at the noon hour, naturally he assumes that you are receptive to an increasingly personal relationship. And the staff has reason to suppose you are "leading him on."

In fortifying you to deal constructively with this fellow worker, I think it most important, firstly, to help you understand why you passively accept his attentions without consciously courting them and without feeling en rapport with him. Since actions speak louder than words and more instantly than thought in doing the "will" of the unconscious self, and since the inner self craves the security of love-attachments—and is blindly undiscriminating in trying to satisfy acute love-hunger—this business of accepting a tainted crust of affection indicates that your personal life is pretty barren of love.

Girl Lacks Love; The Man Is Bored

A GOODLY SUPPLY of wholesome affection is a girl's best insurance against "triangle" troubles, and such insurance consists in having secure ties of mutual devotion in the family, plus an assortment of loyal dear friends, plus—beginning around 20—a really dependable sweetheart or at any rate an interesting eligible candidate (or several) for that role. And it is my guess that you haven't a real beau at this time; and probably no special girl friends either, or your lunch hour wouldn't always be free to share with Hugh.

Now, lets switch for a moment to the other side of the fence—to why Hugh's fancy has lighted on you. Your references to his age, and the age of his child, suggest that he has been married perhaps five years, whereupon the shallowplate type of husband begins to flirt in this futile game. And ordinarily it is the heart-hungry insecure girl who makes the mistake of assenting to it.

For advice, don't lecture Hugh in terms of his duty to his wife. Rather, tell him forthrightly that the noon drives and his other courtesies to you are causing office gossip and criticism of you; therefore you feel obliged to keep the working relationship on a nicely impersonal basis—just as you have with the other men. Then suit your actions to your words; and help Providence find you a man of your own. M. H.

Doll in Mink Working for Heart Campaign

By Nicha Soure

SIX exquisitely dressed little dolls, the smallest workers in the Heart Campaign, made their debut at the Soroptimist Club luncheon yesterday in the Willard Hotel.

The "little women" began a series of personal appearances at club luncheons, fashion shows and social gatherings for the duration of the Heart Association fund drive. At each affair they will be accompanied by a WTOP star who will take sealed bids for each doll. At the end of the campaign the bids will be examined by Heart Association officials and "sold" to the highest bidder. The money will be given to the Heart Fund.

Mrs. Elinor Lee, director of Community Service at WTOP, introduced the dolls at the Soroptimist luncheon meeting presided over by the president, Mrs. Mary V. Judge.

The dolls were presented to the Heart Campaign by Mrs. Elizabeth Perkins, personnel director of the Statler Hotel. They will be on view between appearances in the Statler lobby.

Each doll is dressed in the finest materials. One wears a mink coat, another a beautifully fashioned bridal gown complete with veil and flowers. The dolls were dressed by Statler employes in their annual collection of dolls, with the most beautiful of the lot being assigned to the Heart Campaign fund-collecting service.

Altrusa Examines Question of Hobbies

HOBBIES—to have, or to have not—were discussed by Altrusa Club members at a meeting last night in Brookings Institution.

Under the direction of Miss Olga Halsey and Miss Mary V. Robinson as master of ceremonies, a lively debate between the members led to a broad interpretation of the term "hobbies" and their advantages. The members agreed that hobbies serve as balance wheels to busy career women, as occupational interest of retired women, and as possible new vocations for women seeking a job.

'Mrs. Veep' Stars Again At Party

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

MRS. ALBEN BARKLEY wore a gray suit and white sailor to the luncheon given in her honor yesterday by Mrs. Harold Walker. The wife of the Vice President, always pretty, never looked prettier. Her costume was completed with short black broadtail jacket, black shoes and black bag. Her sailor was trimmed with a broad black band and black veil.

The luncheon was given at Mrs. Walker's house on R st., and after luncheon, the hostess led her guests out into the garden. Miss Carolina Nabuco was a guest, and also Mrs. John Cabot, wife of the newly appointed Minister to Finland.

Others in the company of 16 were Mrs. Walter George; Baroness von Schoen, sister of the hostess; Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis; Mrs. Clark Minor of New York; Mrs. Robert H. Montgomery; Mrs. James K. Vardaman; Mrs. Jesse Monroe Donaldson, wife of the Postmaster General; Mrs. George Thorpe; also Mrs. Laurence Wood Robert, jr., who was cohostess with her mother; Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies; Mrs. Rahel Davies Fitch, and Mme. de Mello-Franco.

Chapmans Glean More Farewells

A COCKTAIL buffet party was given as a farewell yesterday to Gen. and Mrs. John Chapman, who are leaving soon for Australia. The host and hostess on this occasion were the Military and Air Attache of Parkistan, Brigadier N. A. K. Raza, and Mrs. Raza, who entertained at their house on Fessenden st. from 7 to 8:30 p. m.

Among the guests were Mme. Ispahani, wife of the Ambassador of Parkistan; Admiral Sir Frederick Dalrymple-Hamilton and his daughter, Miss Christian Dalrymple-Hamilton; the Military and Air Attache of India and Mrs. Chaudhurt; the Naval Attache of Australia and Mrs. Farncomb

Former Ambassador's Wife Pays Visit

SENORA DE GONZALES-AREVALO, wife of Guatemala's Foreign Minister, is back for a visit to Washington friends and is the guest of the Guatemalan Ambassador and Senora de Geubaud-Cerrara.

Tonight she'll be honor guest at a small dinner to be given by the Counselor of the Guatemalan Embassy and Senora de Linares Aranda. The Guatemalan Ambassador and Senora de Goubaud-Carrera will be in the group which will also include Mr. and Mrs. Tapley Bennett, and Edward Clark of the Department of State.

Senor Gonzales-Arevalo was former Ambassador to the United States, and with his wife left last fall for Guatemala City when he was appointed Foreign Minister.

White House Aide's Fiancee Showered

MISS PATRICIA MOORE, who will wed White House Aide Capt. James Shanahan on February 18, was given a kitchen shower yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Charles L. Bolte, wife of General Bolte. The party was held at the general's quarters at Fort Lesley J. McNair. Miss Moore is the daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. James E. Moore of Fort Myer.

Brig. Gen. Martin Scanlon entertained at dinner last evening at LaSalle du Bois.

The Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wellington Koo were the guests in whose honor Mrs. Hamilton Wright entertained at cocktails on Tuesday.

Soft Music and Sweetheart Roses Plus Plenty of Readers' Questions Remind Anne St. Valentine Is Near

HEAR those strains of soft music? Sniff the fragrance of sweetheart roses? St. Valentine's Day—the prettiest, most sentimental holiday of them all—is just around the corner. And as it casts its lacy shadow before it, a drift of letters about how to celebrate is reaching this column.

DEAR ANNE:

My club is planning a Valentine party and would love to have some suggestions for decorations, games, etc. All our members are girls around 16 and 17, but we plan to invite boys to the party, too.

T. L. N.

You can't beat old-fashioned hearts, flowers, and cupids when it comes to Valentine decorations. Red cardboard hearts with ruffled lace paper edges, cupids in silhouette, and red and white streamers can turn your room into a beautiful bower.

To get the party off to a gay start, give each guest upon entering a clever Valentine favor that ties in with the first game of the evening. Give the girls charm bracelets, the boys tie pins—all made of paper.

Make bracelets by braiding crepe paper strips. Make charms by pasting Valentine seals on bits of red ribbon and tying them to the bracelet. For the main charm, use a heart seal with the name of some famous male lover on each—Heathcliff, Romeo, etc.

Make tie pins by covering the long section of an ordinary paper clip with crepe paper. Leave the back prong free to slip behind the tie. On top, paste red cardboard heart with the name of a girl in the center—Cathy to go with Heathcliff, or Juliet for Romeo, etc. Matching these names will pair off the group for the first dance or game or the supper table.

One game idea is a "heart hunt." Hide a large number of paper hearts around the room before the party starts. Among these should be a gold-colored heart and a silver-colored one—the rest, red. Give three prizes, one to the person or couple finding the largest number of hearts, one to the finder of the gold heart and one to the finder of the silver heart. Candies in heart-shaped boxes make appropriate prizes.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me suggestions for decorating a Valentine cake? And where can I find a heart-shaped pan for baking the cake.

K. L. M.

To take last things first, heart-shaped pans are sold in the houseware sections of most local department stores. They're quite in demand at this time of year, though, so it might be a good idea to check by phone first to see which store has the size you want. Small heart-shaped cakes can be cut from shallow sheet cake with a heart-shaped cutter.

Use a good standard white cake recipe, frost with Seven Minute Icing, then cover the sides only with coconut.

Leave the coconut white or tint it pink this way! Sprinkle shredded coconut on waxed paper. Scatter over it several drops of food coloring, then rub this through the coconut evenly.

On top of the cake, outline a heart with confectioner's frosting tinted red or pink with food coloring. On a big cake, fill in this heart with more coconut. On individual ones, center each cake with a tiny red candle.

HEARTS will be trumps on St. Valentine's Day. Make a whole bevy of them by decorating white cakes with frosting, coconut, and candles

Dior on Top As Paris Ends New Showings

By Sally Swing

United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Designer Christian Dior still is the favorite among French fashion experts, a survey showed today as Paris spring fashion openings closed.

Jacques Fath, who presented a more aggressive fashion line, strongly influenced by the 1920s, had lots of eye-appeal to buyers, but Dior's hard-to-copy "vertical line" still remained tops with French experts.

"The vertical line of Christian Dior will be the line of 1950," wrote Monique Danon, in the Paris evening newspaper, France Soir. She ended her article: "My favorite dress at Dior's? All of them."

Even Cecile Clark in the Communist afternoon newspaper Ce Soir, wrote of Dior, "When he presented his show all doubts on what the 1950 look would be disappeared like snow under a warm sun. Here was a real, pure essentially modern fashion for 1950."

The reason Frenchwomen gave such applause to Dior apparently, is because his models, simple in line but tremendously intricate in cut, are almost impossible to reproduce on a large scale.

Fine Details Make the Dress

A TYPICAL Dior "vertical line" dress, for example, is a navy blue mousseline afternoon gown. The pattern is simplicity itself: small round collar, slightly bloused back, waist in its place, flat hips, skirt slightly wider at the knees and hemline 16 inches from the floor.

What's so special about that? Well, the whole dress is covered with an infinite number of small flat pleats, one overlapping the other. When the mannequin walks, the pleats ripple, and glimpses of the white skin glisten through the dress "like midnight moonlight," according to the Communist Ce Soir.

When Dior was not playing with exciting variations like the pleated sunburst panel on a straight skirt, or a carefully draped front panel all in the "vertical line"—he chose a secondary silhouette called a secmond."

'Almond' Inspired By the Flower

THE "almond," inspired by both the curved pink flower and the green casing of the nut, was translated into a "tablier" skirt and rounded neckline.

The "tablier," used especially on navy blue or black suit skirts, consists of a rounded front panel like a long apron forming the front of the skirt, and a similar rounded panel in back, folding under one of the sides.

The neck of the "almond" is like a horse-shoe collar, giving importance to the bust, which is covered with a straight strapless chemise.

Short, rotund Christian Dior, now 45, has managed to be among the top Paris designers for the past four years, ever since his "new look" turned the fashion world upside down.

One reason Dior, who once studied diplomacy, painting and architecture, has managed to stay up front in fashions is the fact his fancies can be turned into fact—despite the cost. He is backed by one of the richest men in France, Marcel Boussac.

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

NOSTALGIC note is struck in Howard Greer's ultramodern collection by this garden party frock of imported embroidered organdy, with its lavender satin sash and cluster of lilacs at the waist. Puffed sleeves are detachable. Mr. Greer's entire spring collection was sent to Washington from California yesterday for a showing at Woodward & Lothrop's

Greer Fashions Modelled

Lavender, Old Lace Go Modern

By Peggy Preston

WITH lots of lavender and old lace, stays and bustles, California's Howard Greer has managed to create a startlingly modern fashion collection.

Yesterday's showing of his entire spring collection at Woodward & Lothrop's proved that this Hollywood designer is a master at plucking plums from past eras of fashion and adapting them smartly to his own design. His sleek, sophisticated dresses, as streamlined and modern as any that can be imagined, have details that date back to Civil War days and beyond.

Oftentimes the influences of two eras are combined. There is, for instance, his series of short evening dresses, strapless with low cut back, the bodice heavily lined with stays. But the skirt is as narrow as anything seen in the 1920's, and is draped with a bustle, or, more surprising yet, a couple of poufed panniers—a la shepherdess.

One chalk white sheathe dress might have stepped out of the "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" period. It is exceedingly brief, with bare top and hem at midcalf. But the fabric is rich, of pure silk crepe, sewn all over with crystal beading. Mr. Greer offers a softening influence with a huge, drifting circle of tulle which may be used as a cape or overskirt.

Color note of the new Greer collection is a delicate lavender which he calls laguna blue. It is used again and again in drifting silk chiffons, linens and shantungs. For emphasis the designer pins bunches of lilac at the waistbands, throat and wrist of many of his costumes, and trims linen picture hats with the same artificial blooms.

There's an Old World look to the fabrics Greer uses in late afternoon and evening clothes. Fragile laces and tissue crepes, imported Swiss organdies and embroidered muslins are among his favorites.

Less dramatic, but more wearable for the average woman, are Greer's simple day dresses and suits. Beautifully cut and detailed, these are shown mostly in navy and black with touches of white pique or embroidered organdy.

ANOTHER benefit fashion show has been added to the already crowded Spring docket.

From the headquarters of the Womans National Democratic Club comes word that its annual Spring party and benefit this year will be a luncheon and showing of the Christian Dior American collection. It will take place Wednesday, April 12, in the Presidential and Congressional rooms of the Statler Hotel.

The theme used for last year's party will be repeated, that of decorated tables representing all of the 48 states and the territories. Prizes will be awarded to winning tables in various classifications to be announced later.

Honored guests will be Mrs. Harry S. Truman and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley.

Mrs. James A. Murray is general chairman for the event. Acting with her in an advisory capacity are Mrs. Julian Friant, president of the club; Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of Interior; Mrs. Wendell Lund, Mrs. Jackson Davis and Mrs. Frederick Halstead.

THE following day, April 13, Mrs. Truman will be guest of honor at another fashion show. This one, to be staged at the Mayflower Hotel, will feature 3000 years of Greek fashion. Proceeds will go to the Queen Frederika Fund for Orphaned Children in Greece.

Sponsors for the event are Queen Frederika; Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambasador; and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the United States Ambassador to Greece, who has assembled the collection. After its premiere in Washington the show will go to New York, and then tour the Nation's major cities.

Mme. Pandora Tsladaris, daughter-in-law of the Deputy Premier of Greece will be commentator for the show. Miss Muriel King, designer and fashion expert of the American Mission to Greece, will serve as fashion director and coordinator.

The showing will include both ancient and modern fashions, and will be divided into three parts. In the opening part there will be 20 costumes representing 10 periods of Greek history — Minoan, Mycenian, Classical, Alexandrian, Byzantine, French domination, Turkish domination, War of Independence, Balkan wars and Liberation or Postwar era of World War II.

Second part, a geographic portrayal, will utilize 30 costumes depicting feminine dress in various areas of the mainland of Greece, as well as the uniform of the Greek sailor.

The third and completely modern portion of the Cavalcade will display 75 creations of Greek's most outstanding couturiers—Evanghelides and Desses.

None of the costumes in the first two groups have ever been exhibited outside of Greece and many are valuable museum items. Those of the third group are distinctive in their freshness and artistry.

Valentine Party at Patuxent

The Recreation and Welfare organization of the Naval Air Station at Patuxent, under the command of Lieut. Comdr. G. L. Skidmore, will give a Valentine dinner dance on Friday. Buses will leave Washington at 6 p. m. For transportation call CO. 0735. Peter Somstanza is in charge of arrangements for the dinner.

CLASSIC one-button suit, made from a standard pattern, will be among the garments shown at Friday's show at the Statler Hotel.

'Inside Story' Of Fashion Coming Friday

Spring fashions for women who 'sew their own' will be featured at a showing Friday at 3 p. m. at the Statler Hotel. The event is being sponsored by the Singer Sewing Machine Co. and the McCall Pattern Corp.

Entitled "Spring Fashion News —The Outside and Inside Story," the event will stress garments for the homemaker, career girl, junior miss and coed. The costumes will be modeled by a group of New York models brought down for the occasion.

Fabric, design and cost-to-make information on each outfit will be discussed by Miss Jamie Sue Helms, McCall stylist, and Miss Marian Ross of the Singer organization. In addition, each will outline the season's major style trends.

Complimentary tickets are obtainable at Singer Sewing Centers in Washington, Chevy Chase, Silver Spring, Alexandria, Arlington and Shirlington.

Merrill Lynch Reports Drop In Year's Net

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net profit of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, world's largest brokerage house, dropped about $1,250,000 in 1949.

F. C. Hunter

Francis C. Hunter, manager of the firm's office at 815 15th st. nw., reported yesterday that net earnings last year totaled $2,335,370 after partners' salaries and 6 per cent interest on capital, compared with $3,604,513 the previous year.

After estimated income taxes of $1,100,000 there was $1,235,370 available for distribution among the 86 partners of the firm participating in profits.

This compares with $1,704,513 available after taxes in 1948. The firm, Hunter said, contributed $581,777 to its employe profit sharing plan and employe bonuses last year.

Commissions earned on the purchase and sale of listed securities accounted for 56 percent of Merrill Lynch's total income last year; off-board trading and underwriting 16 percent, and interest and miscellaneous income 11 percent.

Hunter added that the Washington branch in 1949 ranked fifth among the firm's 100 offices in net and gross profits. In 1948, the local branch ranked fourth. A sharp upturn put the Philadelphia branch into fourth place.

SESSION ENDS: Informal discussions of extended trading hours and a broadened public relations program highlighted yesterday's concluding session here of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms. Sidney Parry, executive vice president, said the group's governing board again went on record in favor of extending trading hours a half hour a day.

HEADS NADA: Fred L. Haller of Washington yesterday was elevated to presidency of the National Automobile Dealers Association at its annual convention in Atlantic City. Haller, a Hudson dealer, has been active in the NADA for 25 years and last year served as first vice president. During 1933 and 1934 he was president of the Washington Automotive Dealers Association and has been secretary of the local group since 1934. He was chairman of the NADA industry relations committee during 1949 and was vice chairman of both the Washington Commissioners Traffic Advisory Board and the Interindustry Highway Safety Committee. Another Washingtonian, Jay Green, was elected assistant treasurer of the NADA.

Chiller Pictures Paris Poignantly

By Richard L. Coe

THAT CITY KNOWN as Paris has never looked lovelier in pictures than in "The Man on the Eiffel Tower," at Keith's. Those who couldn't care less about the City of Light will find the film a goodish chiller about murder and eccentric people.

The cast is a good one. Charles Laughton, who's shuffled off some of his more trade-marked habits, has a swell part in that Parisian inspector Maigret, a detective who takes his time. Franchot Tone makes his bow as a producer and also has an integral part to play in crawling over the steely framework of le tour Eiffel. A cheerful batch of others is on tap to underline vivid characters you might meet from the Left Bank to Sacre Coeur.

But for this observer, the Ansco technique shots of Paris in the springtime are something very special indeed. The story moves all about the city, from the Sainte Chapelle to St. Cloud, and on the way you drop by such sports as les petits brassieries of the Left Bank, the bookstalls, the pathways along the Seine, the courtyards of the Louvre, the Place de la Concorde, the George Cinque, le Monseigneur, les Deux Magots and other spots dear to Americans in Paris.

The story concerns a young American lad who wants to get rid of his shrewd wife for a frankly diamond-conscious blonde. This depends on the immediacy of his rich aunt's death. She is murdered. Inspector Maigret arrives on the scene. A likely suspect is released from prison on his recommendation. A solitary yoghurt fancier, who likes vodka and caviar in his more lofty moments, slides into the scene. It's up to the inspector to prove the innocence of the obvious, the implication of the guilty. The finale is a tingler on the famed tower.

While this story seems to have some of the woolly features the experienced can pick in mystery yarns, and occasional jumps through plottage, it has the advantage of amusing minor character features and major character eccentricities. Burgess Meredith's direction of himself is on the bizarre side, but when he tackles other people he's shrewd in use of the camera.

This Ansco color business is the best thing to hit the cameras since Technicolor solidified its hold. Instead of trick cameras and ingenious makeup, the film itself does all the work and makeup is natural, street-wear stuff. As a result, close-ups of faces lose that caked, icing quality common to color pictures, and you do get much of the porous tone of skin which so frequently becomes grotesque in cinematic coloring.

Long in the works, this is a German process, one part of which the Russians have lately used. There is still no decision as to its future use in this country, but it should be bright. Surely, it affords the best long-distance outdoor color scenes and the most natural.

And with the budding trees in Paris, the aging buildings and the gorgeous sweep of the Champs Elysees viewed from M. Eiffel's fantastic monument on the Champ de Mars, you get the movies' most enthralling pictures of that fairest of cities.

THE MAN ON THE EIFFEL TOWER. Screen play by Harry Brown; from the novel "A Battle of Nerves," by George Simenon; directed by Burgess Meredith; produced by Irving Allen; an Irving Allen-Franchot Tone Production, presented by A&T Film Productions, Inc., and released by RKO. At Keith's.

Flynn Shows Cattle Lords In 'Montana'

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

A PERSPICACIOUS associate of mine was lamenting the other day that there's nothing new to be said about the Western movie, indicating that, like the Grand Canyon and Bernard Baruch, it's already been described. This is the simple truth, and in triumphant recognition thereof I shall set down some facts about the film at the Warner:

It is called "Montana" and is laid entirely in Montana. The principal people in it are Errol Flynn, a handy guy with a swashbuckle, and Alexis Smith, a handsome young lady with red hair. It relates how Flynn, whose sheepman father was run off the range by a group of cattlemen, returns to Montana, with a big band of sheep, determined to show 'em. Needless to say, he shows 'em, and wins Miss Smith besides. She, of course, is in the cattle department herself, creating a situation very dear to the Hollywood heart.

Fair Enough

All in all, it's a fair enough hour and a quarter. For one thing, it's in Technicolor and was photographed in what I choose to believe was the Grand Teton country of Wyoming. For another, it had been years and years since I had seen Flynn. He didn't have much to do in this and I'm sure it's a good thing, but what chores he was assigned he handled with ease and assurance and, I thought, a certain charm. Miss Smith was rather a routine Western beauty, full endowed with the attributes which go to make up one.

Probably the most unlikely, and easily the most enjoyable, scene in the movie is the one in which Miss Smith and Flynn get together on an engaging little tune called "Reckon I'm in Love." Flynn sings not very well, and doesn't play the guitar at all, though he pretends to, but it's relaxing to see some amateur work in the movies now and then.

Like the man observed, what can you say about a Western? I found this one more sensible than most.

There's a short about skiing at Aspen, Colo., at the Warner, featuring Gary Cooper as narrator. I don't know who thought about thus employing Cooper, but it was a good idea. There are some tremendous shots of Dick Durrance, the Dartmouth and Olympic ski star, doing a schuss, or whatever they do. It was a very ski-worthy audience. At something I thought only mildly funny, everybody screamed with mirth.

An effective cartoon-type item about driving and drinking is also offered. It was repeated by A. J. Brylawski for the Commissioners' Traffic safety committee and presents the combined talents of E. Gallaher, L. Brott and L. Gerlach. A short subject featuring a man named George O'Hanlon is atrocious. The cartoon is fine.

MONTANA, screen play by James R. Webb, Borden Chase and Charles O'Neal; based on a story by Ernest Haycox; directed by Ray Enright; produced by William Jacobs for Warner Brothers. At the Warner.

'Berlin Command'

Russians Raped and Looted at Will After Berlin's Fall

By Brig. Gen. Frank Howley

This is the fifth of 12 articles taken from the new book, "Berlin Command," which will be run daily in The Washington Post. The author, Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, battled the Russians for four years, from 1945 to 1949, as deputy commander and then commander of American forces in Berlin.

BERLIN, after its capture, became another Nanking, with Russians instead of Japanese doing the raping, murdering and looting.

There was no discipline, no control. All ranks, officers and men, took part in the barbarities.

This is a grave condemnation to make of a supposedly civilized army, but the charge can be substantiated. Probably the elements of vengeance was strong in this Russian savagery.

A Russian general admitted to me that the rape cases did the Red Army's reputation no good.

"But," he added in extenuation "they are nothing compared to what the Germans did to us."

The Russians raped and looted at will for two months before we arrived, and made forays in the American sector long afterward, until we stopped them.

A former secretary of mine, a girl of 17, had to be wheeled in a baby carriage several blocks down her street to a hospital, after seven Russian soldiers had taken turns raping her and her mother in their apartment in Steglitz.

Passing by, the soldiers came in through the garden window and attacked the two women, returning time and again during the afternoon, on the same errand. This was only one of many cases. Two hundred and thirty German girls were treated at the same Berlin hospital in a single day—all victims of Russian lust and brutality.

Wife Murdered

INEVITABLY, looting and murder went hand in hand with the raping. The wife of a leading German city official was murdered by a Russian, who entered her house and demanded something in Russian, which the women did not understand. He must have wanted the keys to the kitchen because later he broke down the kitchen door.

The woman thought he had asked to see her papers and, fumbling in her bag, produced her police identity card. Bellowing in fury, the soldier drew his pistol and shot her in the head, yelling, "Capitalist! Capitalist!"

Russian officers and men snatched everything in sight, especially money, jewelry, and silverware. By the time we arrived, looting had been developed on an organized scale.

Back salaries of Red Army men were paid in German currency, which the troops couldn't send back to Russia.

So they went out buying bicycles, watches, jewelry, anything they could use themselves or send home. What they didn't buy, they stole—which was a lot.

'Uhre' and 'Com Frau'

These experiences gave birth to the two most hated expressions in Berlin, even today. One is "uhre, uhre," the Russian way of pronouncing the German word for "watch"; the other is the dreadful cry, "Com Frau."

A Russian would catch the first girl he saw on the street, grab her by the wrist and, with the leering invitation, "Com Frau," drag her into the nearest building and rape her.

If no building was convenient, he violated her in the street.

If a German father or brother objected to this treatment, he was shot in the head. To avoid attack, the women of Berlin resorted to all sorts of tricks to make themselves as unattractive as possible to the Muscovites.

They smeared their faces with mud and kept their usually well-scrubbed persons as filthy as possible. But very few Russians minded the dirt.

Even after our arrival, Russian soldiers invaded the American sector almost every night, returning to haunts they had known before we came. They knew the geography of the city much better than we did and the list of Russian "incidents" was endless—until we called a halt.

An incident at the Potsdamer S-bahn (subway) station brought the issue to a head. Early one evening, I received a report five Russians, including an officer, had stopped a German refugee train in the station and at gun point were systematically stripping the passengers of their possessions.

Former FBI Man

MY PUBLIC SAFETY officer in that borough was Capt. Charles Leonetti, a former FBI man, and one of the best pistol shots in my detachment. He had another officer from local military government headquarters were already on their way to the station when I received the call.

Running toward the steps leading up to the station platform, the two Americans got separated. Leonetti arrived at the steps first. On the platform he could see hundreds of refugees being frisked by the five Russians, who were piling up the loot in neat heaps for subsequent collection.

As Leonetti started up the steps, he let out a war whoop. The Russians swung around and started firing at him. My man fired one shot into the air as a warning, but when they kept right on shooting, he let them have it. Still running toward them, he fired four shots, killing two Russians and wounding another. The rest ducked through the crowd and disappeared.

In a precarious situation like this, it is difficult to recommend a man for a citation when he has shot an "ally," whatever the provocation.

However, I am convinced that Leonetti deserved definite recognition for his courage. But official action had to take its usual laborious course.

A report was made out for General Parks that night, giving the incident in detail. Strangely enough, two American GIs were on that train—what on earth they were doing there, we never did discover—but they saw everything and verified our facts.

Charge of Murder

THE NEXT DAY, Parks had a conference with the Russians, British, and French. Aware of the twisted pattern of Russian facts, we were ready for any claim they might make.

Colonel General Gorbatov immediately launched into an attack against us, charging us with murdering—they love the word "murdering"—Soviet citizens and Soviet soldiers. At the Potsdamer station the night before, he said, a Soviet captain had been shot in the back. The rest of the story was just as accurate.

Parks spoke up firmly. He is a smooth, quiet man, but hard beneath his smoothness.

"Your facts are entirely wrong," he told Gorbatov and went on to cite the details of the incident outlined in our report. "You must control and discipline your troops. You can't expect us to let them run wild in our sector, looting and shooting, without doing something about it."

"Maybe they had a few drinks and the wine caused them to get out of hand," the Russian conceded reluctantly. "Besides, we don't shoot Americans when they get drunk and come into our sector."

Helpless, in the middle of this international conflict, stood the unarmed German police. To assist them with their difficult job, we provided them with a small card, printed in both English and German, with the words "rape," "theft," and "murder," and a few simple, useful phrases, to which they could point in an emergency.

Cards Help Police

WHEN anything serious happened, the German policeman ran to the nearest American soldier, produced his card and pointed to the word describing the emergency, thus overcoming the language barrier without loss of time.

During the next week the Russians complained that a dozen of their men had been shot by American patrols.

One was a Russian officer, caught robbing a German home. He pulled a gun on the American MP, who surprised him as he started looting, and the MP promptly poured eight slugs from a tommy gun into the Russian's stomach. The officer was in the hospital a long time but, miraculously, he lived.

Gorbatov protested strongly against this shooting and I replied by letting him have the facts.

"Your man pulled a gun on our man," I said, "so we treated him just as we treat our own soldiers who pull guns."

"But the officer has eight bullets in the stomach," Gorbatov replied. "Do you Americans call that self-defense?"

"Certainly."

"One bullet, yes," the Russian agreed. "Eight bullets, no. The extra seven were aggression."

RCA Shows Color Video With Electronic Registry

The Radio Corporation of America demonstrated its color television system here yesterday morning with the claim it had "finished building the foundation" and was now ready to refine the system.

The demonstration, a variety show, was presented for the press at 11 a. m. in the NBC studios in the Trans Lux Building, where three color sets and several black and white sets picked up the telecast being transmitted from the WNBW transmitter at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Observers agreed the color was somewhat improved over color shown by RCA in another press demonstration October 10. Color was held "in registry" and showed complete stability yesterday without tinkering with the receivers.

Dr. E. W. Engstrom, of RCA said this showed the final basic step—an electronic means for holding the color in registry while objects move—has been achieved.

Refinements, such as greater color fidelity, can now be made, Dr. Engstrom said. Yesterday's tests showed a greenish cast over most light objects.

The present RCA color receivers use three different tubes, each in a different primary color. The three color images are reflected by a mirror arrangement onto one surface.

RCA is also working on a single tube system which has shown satisfactory results in the laboratory, according to Dr. Engstrom. This system will be ready to demonstrate sometime "during the next period of 4 to 6 weeks," he said.

RCA will demonstrate its three tube system February 23 at the FCC's Laurel, Md., laboratory. Columbia Broadcasting System, which has a mechanical color-wheel system, and Color Television, Inc., of San Francisco, which has a single tube electronic system, will also participate in the comparative tests on that date.

Dr. Engstrom declined to estimate the cost of converting a black and white set to RCA color, or to estimate the time it would take to get RCA color system sets on the market if the Federal Communications Commission said that broadcasters might begin to broadcast color shows with that system.

Manufacturer Disputes Survey Interpretation

A Chicago radio manufacturer yesterday predicted television would create "a much broader market for good movies and movie producers will get a much larger proportion of the customer's dollar than they do today."

The statement was made by Commander E. F. McDonald, jr., president, Zenith Radio Corp., after the results of a Washington survey indicated a sharp drop in movie attendance by television set owners.

McDonald said television set owners include persons "who have given little patronage to the movies" in the past and these will expand the market for movies.

THE DISTRICT LINE

by Bill Gold

Very Few Dollars and No Sense

In a hurry to get the bad news, Stephen Rose of 1403 Newton st. ne. has started to work on his income tax return. After a hard night of figuring, he muses:

"Gee, I wish I could have afforded to live as well as I did last year."

You've got a lot of company, Steve. As some sage observed many years ago: "It's not the high cost of living that causes the trouble; it's the cost of high living."

What makes it worse is that no man has ever earned as much as his neighbors thought he did, or as much as his wife thought he should.

But we do have one advantage over the breadwinners of grandfather's era.

These days, it's illegal to pay us as little as the boss thinks we're worth.

I'm reminded of the story of the two shopkeepers who were discussing their troubles.

"Do you realize," asked one, "that this year you'll have to pay out 30 percent of your income for taxes?"

"It's an outrage," stormed the other. "I didn't make 30 percent last year."

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

The radio repair classes at Chamberlain Vocational High School are running out of work again, so they'd like to repeat the offer they made in this space several months ago.

Anybody with an ailing radio is invited to bring it to the school and let the students fix it, with no charge for labor. All the owner pays is the cost of whatever new parts are used.

For details call National 6000, ask for Chamberlain Vocational, and then for Joseph Schek, instructor of the radio repair classes. He'll tell you where to bring your set, and at what hours.

GOOD TO THE LAST DROP

Jim Mann of 5103 43d ave., Hyattsville, Md., reports that when he was all set for his dessert the other night, his missus encountered a minor crisis.

When she pushed down the valve on the can of ready-whipped cream, she got little more than an in extremis sigh. No whipped cream!

But Jim's wife hadn't reckoned with the resourcefulness of her Mann—and his technique might be useful to other whipped cream lovers who unexpectedly run short.

Jim opened the bottom of the can with an ordinary can opener, and found enough whipped cream left for several desserts.

If we like the idea, he says we're welcome to borrow it. But what I want to know is how does Jim get the last few drops out of a catchup bottle?

HANDWRITING ON THE WALL?

We've been "looking" at new houses for the past two years, and have probably seen several hundred in that time.

John L. might be interested to know that it has just occurred to me that not a single one of those new units was equipped with a coal furnace.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Part-collie female; friendly when she knows you, but good watchdog; likes country life." (Temple 9306.)

"Male and two female kittens, 2 months old; their mother is an excellent mouser and has been training them." (Alexandria 4679 between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m.)

"Pure white 6-month-old part-terrier pup; also a doghouse." (Sligo 9233.)

LONG WAY HOME

Tom Bell, public relations man for TWA, tells a wonderful air-age story about a 9-man test crew that recently took off for a brief spin over Kansas City.

Their big Constellation was just out of the shop, and needed a couple of minutes in the air to be checked out.

But the ship had no sooner taken off than the weather closed in, and there was nothing to do but circle over Kansas City for four hours—waiting for a chance to come down.

But then the tower advised them that no break in the weather was expected very soon. So the captain turned his ship eastward, in search of an open landing strip.

He finally found one—in New York.

There had been no food or water aboard the ship, and of course the crewmen had no baggage with them. Tom reports:

"Hungry, unshaven and slightly rumpled, they finally got back to Kansas City aboard a regular commercial flight, and explained to their wives why they were slightly late for supper."

OVERHEARD

"Do you cash paychecks?" asked the customer. The cashier shook her head and replied:

"Only on my way home, once a week."

Now it's a "Mark of Distinction"

But that wasn't always the case! There was a time when the boy who wore glasses was considered a bookworm. Today, such is not the case . . . the modern youth realizes the value of eyeglasses and whether he's a high school freshman or college senior doesn't mind wearing them in the least . . . in fact, they've become his "mark of distinction." At M. A. Leese he'll find the kind of frames he likes —and a complete optical staff to examine his eyes.

McMahon's Plea for Crusade

By Drew Pearson

Quotes from a speech by Senator McMahon of Connecticut:

"Building the hydrogen bomb does not promise security for the United States. It only promises averting for a few months or years well-nigh certain catastrophe . . . Our diplomacy must tap the roots of our imagination and ingenuity . . . We may choose between moving heaven and earth to stop the atomic armaments race . . . or imitating our totalitarian rivals. We must blame ourselves for failing to bring our message of peace to the people behind the Iron Curtain . . . We must not only crack the Iron Curtain and gain the ear of the Russian people, we must also gain the ear of the people on the near side of the Iron Curtain . . . I favor printing millions of leaflets for world-wide circulation explaining a new United States proposal on atomic peace . . . We should publicly and repeatedly challenge the Kremlin to make public the terms of our proposal to newspaper readers and radio listeners inside Russia . . . This is a time for soul-searching, for launching a moral crusade for peace which alone can save us." (Date of McMahon's speech, February 2, 1950.)

McMahon

Quotes from this column—July and August, 1948—"When one nation is in trouble with another nation, wise leaders concentrate on the weakest point in the other nation's armor. The weakest point in Russia's armor is her own people. . . . We must go over the Kremlin's head to the Russian people in order to convince them that the United States is composed of people who do not want war . . .

Balloons to Russia

"Let American planes over Germany drop weather balloons which the wind currents would float over Russia carrying friendship messages. Imagine the difficulty the Kremlin would have in explaining away these balloons! . . .

"F. W. Danner of Akron, Ohio, has offered to print one million copies of a message to the Russian people without charge. Percy Smith of Los Angeles writes that he would be glad to supply bars of soap imprinted with a message. The Eagle Rubber Co. of Ashland, Ohio, International Latex of Dover, Del., and the Dewey-Almy Co. of Cambridge, Mass., have offered to supply 100,000 balloons free.

"One of the surest ways to prevent war is to show the Russian people that we, the American people, aren't what the 14 men in the Kremlin say we are. As long as the Kremlin knows that 180 million Russians will inflinchingly obey the order to march—without congressional debate, without criticism, and without knowing anything about the issues—then war can always be just around the corned." (Date of columns, July 21 through August 18, 1848.)

General Bradley Enthused

Official reaction—Simultaneous with writing the above columns, this writer called on the branches of the three military services and the State Department. Here is what they said:

Gen. Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff, was the most enthusiastic. He said: "If we can get to the Russian people, I can go fishing." He promised full cooperation—if the State Department approved.

Secretary of Air Stuart Symington was equally enthusiastic, promised full cooperation with B-29s if the State Department gave an O. K.

Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Denfeld was mildly interested.

Later, I called on George Marshall, then Secretary of State, discussed the problem of getting to the Russian people. I suggested that he or President Truman address a radio appeal to Stalin that the Iron Curtain be lifted, permitting friendship between the Russian and the American people.

Marshall Is Dissuaded

Secretary Marshall agreed, said he was considering an appeal somewhat along these lines when the United Nations opened in New York that fall.

But the appeal was never made. Possibly the conventional diplomats got hold of Marshall, persuaded him to stick to the ruts of routine diplomacy.

But—when President Truman announced that he was giving the green light to the hydrogen bomb, he missed one of the propaganda opportunities of a lifetime. He could have gone on the air with a short-wave broadcast to the people of the entire world, appealing for peace, and had millions of copies of that appeal printed in a score of languages.

- SPRING FLANNELS

We would have taken 5,000 yards if we could have got them . . . instead of a mere 1,000! These woolens are so exquisitely textured . . . come in such luscious colors! They're just what you've been hankering for . . . for your new spring suits . . . toppers . . . jackets! Many are sponged, shrunk! All are from one of the country's top coat manufacturers!
